A Spoiled Scene.
E. H. Sothern once found his wit fail him in time of need. It was in the fourth act of "The Lady of Lyons." Sothern played Claude Melnotte, and Virginia Harned was cast as Pauline. Beaumont, the villain, was pursuing Pauline, and she cried loudly for help. Claude is supposed to dash to her rescue and catch the fainting Pauline in his arms. Sothern dashed on to the stage, but slipped and slid, sitting down near the footlights. Losing his presence of mind, he declaimed the line: "Look up, Pauline. There is no danger." As Virginia Harned was standing, this was, of course, an impossibility. By this time the audience was in an uproar, and when Arthur Lawrence, who played Beaumont, scornfully said, "You are beneath me," the amusement of the audience knew no bounds.

The Stick For Wives.
In the old Anglo-Norman marriage ceremony the gentleman used to promise her husband to be buxom "unto my gentil manne." The word buxom corresponds to the modern German biegsam, meaning bending or pliant, and the old English was "buskam," all of which goes to show that things must have been very pleasantly ordered in the good old days that are dead and gone. According to the old English law, which is still unrescinded in the statute book, the "gentil manne" was allowed to beat his good wife with a stick the diameter of which did not exceed a quarter of an inch.—New York World.

What She Wanted to See.
The chauffeur was taking his load of tourists for a ride through the residence portion of the metropolis and pointing out to them the state mansions of the nabob. "I've often heard," said the portly dowager with the diamonds, "of these Oliver Wendell homes. Would you mind showing us one of 'em?"—San Francisco Argonaut.

Sensitive.
"I hear you is out of a job, Willie?"
"Yes. I may be a little too sensitive, but when the boss sez 'Git to blazes out of here before I kick you out!' then I got mad and resigned me position."—Illustrated Bits.

Their Only Job.
"Why, Mrs. White," began the summer visitor newly returned to Saymouth, "how those maples of yours have grown since last year! It's perfectly amazing!"
"Oh, I don't know's it's anything to wonder at," said Mrs. White easily. "They ain't got anything else to do."—Youth's Companion.

Erudite.
"Oh, baby," exclaimed the Boston mother, "what does make you cry so?"
"I really cannot say," was the unexpected answer. "I have never indulged in introspection."
