GLOUCESTER.

The Greatest Fishing Center in the United States.

Everything smells of fish in Gloucester. It is not an odor to which any of the natives object. Nor do visitors find in it anything of which to complain, for it is the pungent ozone of the sea, the smell of fish freshly caught. Gloucester has really never known anything else, for since its beginning, approaching three centuries ago, it has always had fishing for its chief industry, and today it is the greatest fishing center of the United States and, according to the belief of many, of the world.

When a two masted schooner, laden to the gunwales with its cargo of fish, comes into the wharves the fish are carried in great tubs. Over these stand a company of experts, men who have cleaned hundreds of thousands of fish and who can make the quick cuts and do the scraping with incredible speed. Running to each tub is a hose, and after the waste has been removed an instant under the high pressure of water from the hose cleans out the fish completely and makes it sweet and ready for the next step in the operation. Codfish is dried and salted before being sent to the market, and the work is also done on the wharves. Here are ranged hundreds of tables exposed to the bright sunlight. The cleansed fish are piled up in such a manner that the warm rays get a most admirable chance at them.

From the open air drying tables the fish are shifted to the boxing and packing establishments, which are also located along the water front, and then they are made ready to be shipped to all parts of the world.—Springfield Union.

INSOMNIA.

Curious Way in Which It Affected a Woman's Imagination.

"I can't stand this any longer, doctor," said the nervous woman. "If the patient in the next room to mine, No. 22, doesn't keep quiet at night I must change my room or leave the sanitarium altogether."
 "What's the trouble?" asked her physician.
 "She has one of those squeaky old wooden bedsteads, and every time she turns over it awakens me. Last night she did nothing but toss to and fro, and I didn't get a single wink of sleep."

"I'll see to that at once," he assured her. "A woman in your condition certainly must have absolute quiet at night. I'll have the patient in No. 22 sleep on the roof. The fresh air will be better for her anyway."

The next morning the nervous woman appeared in the consultation room of the sanitarium in radiant mood.

"How did you sleep?" asked the doctor.
 "Perfectly," she replied. "I'm so much obliged to you. It made a great difference."

"I knew it would," he said gravely. He was telling the truth, because he knew the power of the imagination in disease, especially of the nerves. As a matter of fact, No. 22 had not been occupied at night for three weeks. The patient had been sleeping on the roof all the time.—Exchange.

Get Quite Pleasant.

The mistress of a hospitable home in New York recently had to employ a new second girl whose work she liked, but whose blunt and forbidding manner she liked not at all. She talked to the girl and urged her to be pleasant and agreeable whenever she had to say anything to other people, particularly visitors.

A great surprise for the mistress followed this admonition. The next day the girl happened to attend the door, and she opened it just as her mistress was passing through the hall. To the astonishment and bewilderment of the latter the girl reached out and, catching the caller by the hand, actually dragged her inside the door, expressing her pleasure at seeing her, and then hastened to announce the call to her mistress.—New York Sun.

Canaries of Paris.

The vendor of chickweed in Paris is a well known figure. The sellers are numerous, and their cry is one of the most noteworthy of those that resound in the morning in the streets of the French capital. According to the Bulletin des Hautes, there are about a hundred thousand canaries in the capital, and the daily consumption of chickweed is estimated at 2000. This sum looks large, but it allows only 2 cents for each bird. The Paris contemporary points out that the consumption of chickweed is not so large as it appears of the weed.

The Earliest.

"How first do you see the company?" "I don't pay much attention to that," answered the respondent, "but most of my friends are in the company of the party with which you are out of the way."—Washington Star.

Feminine Nervous.

There are nervous women, there are hypernervous women. But women so nervous that the continual rustle of a silk skirt makes them nervous—no, there are no women so nervous as that.—Wellington Free Lance.

Sticks to His Word.

"He is a man who sticks to every word he says."
 "Is that so?"
 "Yes; he stutters so."—New York Telegram.

Necessity is stronger far than art.—Aeschylus.

The State Journal is trying awful hard to get people to give that daily a trial. Its offer now is to send the paper from date until January 1, 1909, for only 50 cents without Sunday, or 75 cents with Sunday. The publishers feel sure that anyone who tries The State Journal will stick. However, they have adopted an absolute rule of stopping every subscriber when his term is out. If there is anything that makes a man mad it is to subscribe for a city daily and then have to fight with the publishers to get it stopped or pay for something he doesn't want. The Journal's new plan will be popular.
