REVOLUTIONARY MEMORIES.

Their Revival in the Dedication of the Fort Lee Monument.
The monument at Fort Lee, N. J. which was unveiled a short time ago marks another step in the movement for preservation of the picturesque Palisades of the Hudson, and it serves also to perpetuate the memories connected with the romantic history of this beautiful region. At the unveiling ceremonies George W. Perkins, president of the commission in charge of the Palisades Interstate park, made the announcement that a half million dollars has now been expended in the creation of the park and all of the Palisades and river front from Fort Lee to Nyack have now been purchased for it except one or two parcels, the title for which will be in the commission's hands by next year.
Governor Fort of New Jersey, who made a historical address on the occasion of the unveiling, read from documents recently unearthed in Trenton relating to the recapture of the fort by the Americans from the British on May 14, 1781. It was on Nov. 20, 1778, that General Greene and the American forces evacuated Fort Lee, and they at that time narrowly escaped capture by 5,000 British under Cornwallis.

Soldiers of the regular army, civil and Spanish war veterans and sailors and marines from the new battleship New Hampshire took part in the dedication of the monument, which shows a Continental soldier, his musket slung over his shoulder, climbing up the Palisades, while a drummer boy is aiding him. The sculptor is Carl E. Tefft. Mr. Tefft was born in New York city in 1874. He has executed various portrait busts and ideal figures and was creditably represented in the sculpture of the Buffalo and St. Louis expositions.

MRS. LEWIS S. CHANLER.

Wife of the Democratic Candidate For Governor of New York.

Mrs. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, wife of the Democratic candidate for governor of New York, was Miss Alice Chamberlain of Red Hook, N. Y. Her husband, the present lieutenant governor of the Empire State, is a man whose "vagaries," as they used to be called, have not been very well understood until recently, but to Mrs. Chanler they were never so much of a mystery. She could appreciate why he was so much interested in efforts to uplift the downtrodden classes, although himself a millonaire, and why he was willing to work hard to defeat the interests of a party without expectation of personal reward. It is said that in days gone by Lieutenant Governor Chanler was so deeply engrossed in his study of social problems and the welfare of the people that he took little thought for his appearance and went around in clothes that never fitted and seemed to belong to some one else, though the immediate condition of his linen and his general air stamped him as a man of breeding and refinement. Mrs. Chanler has induced him to give more attention to such details as those of personal attire than he formerly gave. Their marriage took place in 1890.

The Democratic candidate and his wife have a beautiful country estate at Red Hook, and there are two sons and a daughter in the family.

The State Journal is trying awful hard to get people to give that daily a trial. Its offer now is to send the paper from date until January 1, 1909, for only 50 cents without Sunday, or 75 cents with Sunday. The publishers feel sure that anyone who tries The State Journal will stick. However, they have adopted an absolute rule of stopping every subscriber when his term is out. If there is anything that makes a man mad it is to subscribe for a city daily and then have to fight with the publishers to get it stopped or pay for something he doesn't want. The Journal's new plan will be popular.
