Death of Caleb Clothier.
A telegram from Holdrege, Nebraska, announces the death, last week, of Caleb Clothier, well known to many readers of this paper. Mr. Clothier has for years lived on a ranch near Carrio, Hayes county, coming to it is section of Nebraska, more than 25 years ago from New Jersey. Formerly very wealthy, his closing days were in anything but affluence, the last two years being spent in Wallace, the ward of a friend.

He recently went to Holdrege for medical treatment, and died at the home of J. M. Harbaugh in that city, cancer of the liver and old age being the stated cause of death. He was 78 years of age. He had no relatives in this part of the country, an only sister being the sole survivor. She is over 80 years old and lives in Mt. Holly, N. J., where the remains were shipped for burial.

(OUR MOTTO:—LIVE AND LET LIVE.)

The Conclusion of that Thrilling Story.

Shall the People Get What They Pay For?

My long business experience, trying to please my customers and thereby making a dollar for myself, has taught me that a square deal with a small margin shows larger profits in the end than a questionable deal with a large per cent of profit at the time. Now, understand me, Lem, I am not asking for your patronage because I have been here since the year one or any similar reasons; that strikes me as an appeal to charity. No, I want to figure your wants on a business basis that will appeal to your pocketbook and at the same time make a dollar for Stansberry. Is this not fair?" Lem says, "Yes, by the great horn-spoon, it is, and I reckon I ain't been so flummoxed mad and worked up since Heck was a pup to think that I would listen to Mr. Hard Knocker working his jaw over time. Good-bye."

Now, Dear Reader, this ad has a truthful moral: If you want anything in my line I want to ask you to COME to me. Bring ME your bill, if you want to build a house, a barn or make any improvements. I want a chance to show you that I am here to do business. I have no solicitors; pay no commissions, except in the form of a discount to the party buying the lumber. A square deal to all on a live and let live basis that will make every customer a friend, will be my style of doing business.

On account of many other demands on our time and attention, incident to the change of ownership of the WHITE HOUSE GROCERY, we have been dilatory in making formal announcement of the fact. But—

We will continue the name—the White House Grocery—and will do all in our power to maintain the high standard of this popular business house, to keep all its old patrons and by "delivering the goods" at a fair and reasonable price to merit the patronage of many new ones. His Mother-in-law Won.

By one of those queer marriage settlements sometimes made in England a young man agreed to pay his wife's mother $100 on the first day of each year. He settled in Canada, and when he came to make the remittance he deducted the amount of the postage and sent her only $99.84. The mother-in-law insisted that she must have the other 16 cents, and after they had quarreled by mail about it for a month or two she had her attorneys bring suit against him in the Ontario courts. She made him pay, too, and stuck him for the cost of the action, though she was obliged to fee her own lawyers. The total expenses of this sixteen cent lawsuit were said to be exactly $612, most of which fell upon the economical son-in-law.

Siam's Weights and Measures.

In Siam the liquid measure used is derived from a coconut shell which is capable of holding 830 tamarind seeds, and twenty of these units equal the capacity of a wooden bucket. In dry measure 830 tamarind seeds make one "kanahn," and twenty-five "kanahn" make one "sat," or bamboo basket; eighty "sat" make one "kwien," or cart. This is an example of the primitive origin of most units of weight and measure.

PAINTERS' BLUNDERS

Reckless Pranks Played With Heavenly Bodies.

IMPOSSIBILITIES IN NATURE.

A Rainbow Depicted Wrong Side Out and Moons in Positions and Forms That Could Not Occur—Amusing Anachronisms by Old Time Artists.

That artists, like authors, should commit many errors of fact is hardly a cause for wonder. Rather, it is astonishing that they are not found oftener at fault in view of the great variety of knowledge required in their work. Despite this, however, there is no manner of excuse for certain absurdities.

For example, there is the case of an English painter who depicted an elaborate rainbow. Unfortunately he painted it wrong side out. But we forget amazement at such stupidity in admiration for the artist's magnificent audacity when we learn that he charged £20 additional for repainting the rainbow colored in accordance with nature's arrangement.

Painters are very prone to distress the astronomers by their reckless pranks with the heavenly bodies, particularly with the moon. One artist presented a scene in which was a crescent moon low in the eastern sky directly opposite a setting sun. Moreover, this genius disdained the criticisms of the learned. He insisted that this arrangement was necessary for the composition, inasmuch as the rest of the picture would be destroyed by a full moon—the only one possible in such a situation.

Other artists have trifled with the moon by turning its convexity away from the sun, which is, of course, impossible in nature. In one picture the moon was placed near the constellation of the Great Bear, though as a matter of fact the satellite never ventures into this part of the heavens. There are, too, oft recurring errors made in the bulk of the orb. An American astronomer amused himself by measuring the moons in a number of paintings. He established the fact that by reckoning from the satellite's size the average height of the hills in these landscapes was forty-three miles. One of the mountains, indeed, had the stupendous altitude of a hundred miles.

Artists of old time were often outrageously wrong, sometimes necessarily by reason of the limitations imposed by the ignorance of the period. A Dutch artist painted the garden of Eden with well clipped borders and yew trees trimmed into fantastic shapes. He wrought in all innocence, for of such sort were the only gardens of his experience. But the excuse does not apply to a Dutch painting of 1794. This showed Abraham about to slaughter Isaac by means of a blunderbuss—the product of an age 3,000 years after the time of the patriarchs! Yet this mistake occurs again and again. There have been elaborate paintings of the children of Israel crossing the Red sea with muskets on their shoulders. A beautiful ivory tankard, an Augsburg carving of the early seventeenth century, was sold for a high price in London not long ago. The design, which is exquisite in workmanship, shows the good Samaritan, with his attendants, in the Jericho road. One of the servants carries a gun!

Many a child as well as some older persons has puzzled over that "beam" in the eye of which the New Testament speaks. It is not always understood that this means a beam of light. But it was left to Solomon Bernard, in his woodcuts illustrating the Bible, published at Lyons in 1553, to picture this beam as one of wood, rectangular in section and several feet in length!

The matter of costumes offers vast opportunity for flaws, which the painters have not failed to seize. In the national gallery at Edinburgh Pharaoh's daughter and her accompanying women are exhibited garbed in the long, waisted bodices and hooped skirts of Europe in the sixteenth century. The national collection in London has a picture of Joseph and his kindred in Egypt, where the buildings shown are not at all Egyptian in their style of architecture, but distinctly Italian. In the same gallery Paolo Veronese's "The Family of Darius at the Feet of Alexander After the Battle of Issus" displays the women of the group in the pointed waists and inflated skirts that made the familiar dress of Venetian women in the painter's time.

Errors that have to do with armor may be more readily pardoned, though the artists fail lamentably in knowledge as to the earlier forms of metal protection. Thus in some paintings showing the time of Christ the warriors are seen clad in beautifully damascened mail, yet this form of armor did not come into actual use until half a thousand years later.

Similarly, in other pictures of Christ's time, monks are portrayed in their robes, with tonsures. In fact, however, they did not exist in the church prior to the fourth century A. D.

A curious illustration of the limitations set on genius by circumstance is exhibited in one of the world's most famous paintings, "The Last Supper," Leonardo da Vinci simply did not know that the table, the cloth, the plates, the knives and forks and salt cellars were impossibilities in the scene he designed to portray. The eastern people of that age who were his subjects used no table, no chairs, no forks, but squatted about a common dish and ate from it with their fingers. —Pittsburg Post.

Pouring Prosperity Through a Puncture.

Ever see a drunken man trying to fill a bottle with the bottom broken out? It's a great waste, and it looks mighty silly.

But it's no more foolish and no more wasteful than for a sober man to expect his town to fill up with people and bubble over with prosperity when he is continually pouring his dollars into the wide world outside THROUGH THE MAIL ORDER HOLE in the bottom of his home town.
