of today who does not possess a bank account is an exception.

To no one is a checking account more of a luxury. It solves the problem of always having his money at hand, of making exact change, and receiving a receipt in return for the money paid.

Some men, even to this day, persist in carrying a roll of currency on their persons—they are the ones we usually read of in the papers as having been "held up" and robbed.

THE little burg of Hendley comes into the limelight with a weekly newspaper, this week. "Delphic" is the rather too sonorous name, but it is highly creditable to the town and the publisher Edwin Perkins.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN may have been the voice and hand or even the conscience of Impotence, but some how or other he will still appeal to the average American on account of the justness and gentleness of his big kindly human heart.

ARAPAHOE voted down the water works proposition, but electric lights carried. The law requires three fifths majority in voting upon water works, while a majority carries in electric light propositions. An inconsistency at best.

THE Arapahoe Pioneer calls Representative Kelley of Furnas county sharply to account for his vote for the measure seeking to legalize Sunday baseball playing. America is too rapidly approaching the European practice of Sunday observance to need legal encouragement.

THE constructive statesman is the American ideal. Obstruction can never appeal to the patriotic and intelligent citizen of the republic with the same potency as does construction. These prefixes largely differentiate the two leading parties today. The Democracy is usually on the defense.

THAT political enthusiast who charges up and down the land, seasonably, claiming his party to be responsible for all the country's prosperity and the other fellows to be the cause of the land's disasters certainly does not credit the intelligence or patriotism of the American people. He is usually some pretty cheap demagogue to whom truth is a stranger and office-seeking a habit.

Some Facts About His Death.

Inquiry as to the attendant details in the death of the late William Crockford brings the following facts from Major Henry W. Corl, adjutant of the South Dakota Soldiers' Home at Hot Springs: "In regard to the death of William Crockford, have to say: That his death was a surprise to all of us, as he appeared to be in his usual health, complained slightly, but told me just the day before his death that he thought his trouble was indigestion,—and was, I am told, pacing or walking back and forth in his room just a few minutes before he expired. Paralysis of the heart was the cause. Died sitting in his chair.

"Mrs. Crockford was here with her husband, and had been for some time, and took the remains to Black Hawk for burial."

William Crockford spent many years of his life in Red Willow county. Notice of his death appeared in THE TRIBUNE a few weeks since.

No More Cradles.

"A cradle?" said the salesman. "Oh, no! You don't want a cradle." He smiled.

"First kid, ain't it?"

"Yes," admitted the young father, frowning.

"I knew you weren't experienced, or you wouldn't ask for a cradle," said the salesman. "You see, they've gone altogether out. We don't sell two a year."

"Why did they go out?"

"Because they're unhealthy, bad for the kid. They lower the temperature, hurt the heart and bring on nausea, colic, regular seasickness. It stands to reason that the violent rocking of a cradle can't be good for frail little baby any more than the violent rocking of a ship in a storm is good for the passengers. Moreover, they keep somebody busy rocking the baby to sleep. Now the baby goes to sleep of its own accord."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Won With Whips.

According to Herodotus, while the Scythians were away on a long campaign their slaves took the opportunity to rebel and seize all their masters' property. The latter on their return promptly attacked them, but were continually defeated until at last one of them hit on the brilliant idea of attacking the slaves with whips only.

That, he said, would remind them of their origin and so cow them that they would never dare to stand. The Scythians followed his counsel, and it fell out as he had predicted. When the slaves beheld their masters riding down upon them flourishing the terrible knotted whips they knew so well they threw down their arms and fled.

"Will you let me have another look at that bill, sir? I think I have omitted something."

ADDRESS THE

WEEKLY KANSAS CITY STAR, KANSAS CITY, MO.

McCOOK, NEBRASKA, FEBRUARY 18, 1909

Editor Tribune,

McCook, Nebraska.

Dear Sir:—

I am sure you will be glad to publish this letter because of its news values to your many women readers.

I have just returned from Kansas City and St. Joe, where I spent two weeks examining the new styles of hats and millinery, and choosing what I thought was the best of all of them for our spring stock.

The millinery styles for this Spring are so greatly different from those of a few months ago that it puzzles me how to describe them.

There are lots of chiffon hats being shown—not plain by any means, but with piles and waves of this pretty and airy material being used. These chiffon hats are almost as light as a feather and unless trimmed heavily can scarcely be felt upon the head. Jet is being used extremely. Jet beads are wound round and round some hats, and there are jet spangled hats and buckles of jet.

The tailored hats are very smart—just a wing or so, but my, how hard to get the wings just the right width, length and "perk" to give the hat the chicness every designer strives to embody in the hats she shapes.

Braid hats are in extra favor this season and never have I seen such a bewildering number of styles and colors. The colors are soft and indefinable. Flowers will be the most used decoration, and there are flowers to be seen that nature never produced, yet are exquisite in shape and coloring.

Ornaments will be used to a great extent and these go back to the old Roman and Egyptian days for design and coloring. There is one thing that I nearly overlooked and that is the size of the hat. Last year it was the big hat and nothing else. This season it is not that way. Medium and quite a lot of very small hats are shown and all are good. It is a case of get a hat that suits the face.

Yours very truly,

MRS. J. P. NIES,

of LOVELL & NIES, MILLINERS.
