Tariff Bill Conferences, Past and Present

THE sessions of the tariff bill conferences in the luxurious apartment at the national capitol assigned to the use of the senate finance committee will make that room historic. The circumstances naturally recall the conferences over the Dingley law, which was enacted just twelve years ago. That measure became law on July 24, 1897. When congress met in special session last March to revise this law it was freely predicted that the work of revision would be completed by the middle of May. The political wisecracks were far astray on their guesses that time. Twelve years ago party lines were drawn with regularity and precision in the revision of the tariff. The country expected an upward revision and got what it expected. This time the same party which passed the Dingley law had assembled its representatives to revise it, and by reason of the party platform and the utterances of the party candidate the country looked for a downward revision. The principal differences arising in either house during the consideration of the bill have been between members of the majority party, divided on the question of how low or how high rates of duty should be, rather than between the members of the opposing parties, this being especially true in the senate, where party lines became at times almost obliterated. Herein lay the principal contrast between the revision of 1897 and that of 1903.

During the consideration of the tariff bill in the senate the members of the house of representatives had little to do, and many scattered to their homes and seashore and mountain resorts instead of remaining within the warm and enervating confines of the District of Columbia. As soon as there were signs that the senate was getting to the end of its work on the bill representative Dwight, the Republican whip, began sending out telegrams to members of the majority bidding them to be on hand to discharge any legislative duties that might fall upon them and intimating that Speaker Cannon was desirous no time should be lost in sending the tariff bill to conference.

A similar duty regarding Democratic members fell to Congressman Champ Clark of Missouri, who is filling in so able and energetic a manner the post of minority leader. In the senate the Democrats were remarkably quiet during the discussion over tariff schedules. This was not true as to the Democrats of the house while the bill was under consideration by that body, and this fact was due in no small measure to Mr. Clark. Nor is he the kind of man to sit still and say nothing during the consideration of the bill in conference. The minority leader is a nifty fighter who is very quick to see any opening to get at his opponent and to seize the opportunity for a well directed blow.

Legislative duties have interfered with Leader Clark's plans for his summer vacation this year. Many statesmen employ this time in adding to the income they derive from Uncle Sam by going on lecture tours. This has been Congressman Clark's habit. He had agreed to start out on the Chautauqua circuit this summer on June 28. He was compelled to notify the Chautauqua people that unless about two-thirds of the senators should be suddenly stricken with tongue paralysis—a very improbable event—he would be kept in Washington until too late to fill some, at least, of his appointments. The outcome was as he suspected. No legislator of the upper house was prevented from talking on the tariff by the paralysis of his vocal apparatus. Some of the Washington statesmen have lost money at the rate of $200 a day by reason of the prolongation of the tariff debate. They may not have liked the situation, but most of them have taken their medicine nobly.

In the closing hours of the debate on the tariff bill in the senate Mr. Bailey championed the tobacco user. "Tea is an article that not one man in ten uses, and he is abundantly able to pay the tax," declared Mr. Bailey. "Tobacco is the comfort of nine persons out of ten, and they are the very poor."

BUSINESS METHODS.

The Necessity of Advertising and the Efficiency of Salesmen.

A man may have several carloads of ability. He may have brains and ideas and other desirable things. But all the ideas ever "deated" will not avail to raise a man who neglects that all important item of advertising. You simply must get attention. Of course you can get attention by firing off a revolver during office hours or you can do it by wearing loud clothes and proclaiming your kluship in the sporting fraternity. But most men who have risen from the ranks have carefully neglected to use methods of this kind. Every office man must act as his own salesman. He must first prepare himself by increasing his efficiency. He must be able to do the work for which he is hired. Not only should he do that for which he is hired, but he must do that work better than it ever was done before. When that item has been attended to it is then time to look about for more work.

The wise employee will keep his eye on the job ahead or, better still, will look at a job which does not exist, but which should exist for the good of the business. The next step is to think out a selling talk that will get the attention, arouse the interest, create a desire and bring about in the mind of the employer a desire to do what the live employee desires him to do.—Book-keeper.

FORGOT HIS OWN LINES.

A Quotation That the Poet Campbell Failed to Recognize.

That poets, like other folks, sometimes forget their own creations is shown by an incident related by Sir Frederick Pollock. At a dinner where Thomas Campbell and Lord Nugent were present the conversation drifted from the use of Latin words in English to monosyllabic verse. Some one expressed a doubt whether two consecutive lines composed of words of one syllable could be found in our language. Lord Nugent at once quoted: "By that dread name we wave the sword on high, And swear for her to live—with her to die."

Campbell said he did not believe in the lines and asked where they came from. Lord Nugent said, "From your own 'Pleasures of Hope.'" "How do you know that?" asked the poet. "I know it all by heart," replied Nugent. "I'll bet you a guinea you can't repeat it," said Campbell. The bet was taken and Nugent started declaiming. The poet soon got tired and said: "I see you know the poem. Don't go any further." The other insisted upon repeating the whole poem or claiming double stakes, and Campbell paid the extra guinea in order to be spared the recital of the poem which had made him famous—which he had forgotten.—New York Mail.

How to Patch a Canoe.

There are several different "home-made" methods by which to repair a crack or leak in a canoe. Perhaps the most permanent is varnish or shellac and silk. Put a little varnish over the crack, place a small silk patch over the varnish, letting it dry, then varnish or shellac over the silk. Two coats will be sufficient. If it is a varnished canoe, use white silk, and the patch can hardly be detected, the silk being transparent. This may be put on both inside and outside if necessary. White lead and varnish mixed well and put in the crack is also a good permanent repair. If on a cruise in the woods and without the necessary articles to make a permanent repair, get a little spruce gum off the trees, heat and add a little grease and put over the crack. The grease has a tendency to keep the gum from getting very hard, and it will not break so easily. The silk and shellac repair is the usual remedy for a puncture in a canvas covered canoe.—Recreation.

The Dogs of Turkey.

In the matter of kindness to animals it is said that the Turk cannot be surpassed. Thus at Stamboul the wandering dogs are treated with great gentleness, and when puppies come into the world they are lodged with their mother at the side of the street in improvised kennels made out of old boxes lined with straw and bits of carpet. And frequently when a young Turk happens to be flush of money he goes to the nearest baker's shop and buys a quantity of bread, which he distributes among the dogs of the quarter, who testify their gratitude by jumping up at him with muddy paws and sniffling muzzles.

When Youth Wants.

Old age has many deficiencies, and middle age more. But you may take it that you are not really an old man so long as you take an interest in your personal appearance. There is not a nurse who does not know the sign of convalescence—when the patient wants to be shaved and put a good appearance in this world. And so long as the man of sixty can take an interest in the latest tie—and tie it—he is preserving his youth.—London Chronicle.

He Had a Reason.

"I notice you are very cautious in what you say about people."
"Yes."
"Why is this?"
"Well, I ain't prominent enough to claim I was misquoted."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE PERSIAN NATIONALISTS.

Their Leader, Satar Khan, and Their Loyalty to Their Constitution.

The leader of the Nationalist forces, now in the ascendant in Persia, is Satar Khan. Subordinate to him in the Nationalist ranks are Siphadar and Sardarassad, the leaders under whom the troops opposing the shah entered and occupied Teheran, the Persian capital. The occupation of the capital of this ancient empire by the Nationalists and the efforts of the latter in the direction of re-establishment of constitutional government are the direct result of the insistence of the Persian people that the shah govern the country under the constitution that was granted on Jan. 1, 1907. The shah has ignored and withdrawn the constitution, which he signed when he ascended the throne. His course has resulted in widespread unrest in Persia, which in some sections has approached anarchy. The movement to compel him to observe the constitution gained force until, following the dissolution of parliament in 1908, a great part of the country broke out in insurrection. The Nationalists were especially strong at Tabriz, which fell into their hands after fierce fighting.

While the shah was trying to cope with this situation in the north the Bakhtiari tribesmen, the fighting race of Persia, rose in the south and early this year captured Isfahan, 210 miles south of Teheran. The tribesmen then began the long march to the capital, and their advance guard arrived in front of Teheran in June.

The British and Russian governments have been exerting their influence to induce the shah to summon a representative assembly to bring the state of anarchy to an end, and Russia, acting in full accord with Great Britain, sent a military expedition into Persia from Baku for the protection of foreigners.

The Persian empire is divided into British and Russian spheres of influence, and these complications, together with the Turkish aggression on the western frontier, have served to increase the hostilities between the internal factions.

THE SAYLER TRAGEDY.

A Distressing Case In Which Prominent Families Figure.

It is a pitiable situation in which Mrs. John Saylor of Watska, Ill., finds herself. She watched from her cell in the county jail the funeral procession in which the body of her husband was borne to its last resting place. Mr. Saylor, a banker and leading citizen, on entering his home on a recent evening found there Dr. W. R. Miller, and, words between the two men ensuing, Dr. Miller drew a revolver and shot Mr. Saylor, killing him. Mrs. Saylor and Dr. Miller were both held and were charged jointly with responsibility for the death of the slain banker. Golda Saylor, seventeen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Saylor and for whose sake the banker is said to have shielded the relations he suspected between his wife and Dr. Miller, has issued a statement in which she says the latter was a good friend to her and her mother and, she believes, killed her father only in self defense. Mrs. Miller has said she was confident her husband had done her no wrong, and she expects to stand by him in his trial.

When You Think

Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. Campbell Bros.' Great Shows.

Circus Day in McCook is August 11, the day when the Campbell Brothers Great Consolidated Shows of Fairbury, Nebr., will appear here. Each succeeding year new features are hunted up and added to this already famous circus—startling acts that play upon the imagination; hair breadth escapes in mid-air by daring acrobats and the various ring acts that never fail to amuse. Horses always take a prominent part in every circus, and this is no exception to the rule. Beautiful silky-coated horses with glittering trappings and mounted by a bevy of pretty girls in natty costumes catch the eye on all sides; no matter where it is, in the parade, or under canvas, in the sawdust ring, horses reign supreme. Campbell Bros. are famous for their thoroughbred horses and the number and beauty of their circus horses this season are beyond comparison. Watch for the grand street parade at 10 a. m. and the big shows at 2 and 8 p. m. under the new waterproof tents, rain or shine. The parade is over a mile in length and contains 11 elephants, 250 horses and nearly 500 people.

Cured Hay Fever and Summer Cold.

A. S. Nusbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed only to aggravate it. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." A. McMillen.

No matter how long you have suffered, Foley's Kidney Remedy will help you. Mrs. S. L. Bowen, of Wayne, W. Va., writes: "I was a sufferer from kidney disease, so that at times I could not get out of bed, and when I did I could not stand straight. I took Foley's Kidney Remedy. One dollar bottle and part of the second cured me entirely." It will cure you. A. McMillen.

If you are all run down Foley's Kidney Remedy will help you. It strengthens the kidneys so they will eliminate the impurities from the blood that depresses the nerves, and causes exhaustion, backache, rheumatism, and urinary irregularities, which sap the vitality. Do not delay. Take Foley's Kidney Remedy at once. A. McMillen.
