His Tokens of Farewell.
Among the legends that have gathered around Sir Alfred Jones' name is one to the effect that he was in the habit of signifying to an office visitor, by offering him a banana, that he desired to end the interview. If the banana was accepted and the call prolonged Sir Alfred arose and presented his visitor with a fine flower from one of the glass stands in his office. But, supposing his visitor stayed after the flower—well, the legend continues, Sir Alfred then offered a pass to the West Indies on one of his small steamers, with a free holiday for six weeks at his hotel.
It is told, however, that on one occasion Sir Alfred got the worst of the banana trick. A young reporter called on him to learn on behalf of his newspaper something about the shipping conflict. When, after a ten seconds' conversation regarding the weather, Sir Alfred's hand was straying toward the banana plate, the reporter hooked a couple of bananas out of his own pocket. In the sweetest tone of innocence he said, "Will you have a banana, Sir Alfred?"—Westminster Gazette.

The Vital Test.
"My eyes seem to be all wrong," explained Mr. Pinchpenny to the expensive oculist. "They're weak and tire easily. After a bit everything seems to swim before them. Bright lights make me dizzy. Can you assist me?" The expensive oculist nodded. "Your case is a common one," he replied, "but I fear it will necessitate a treatment extending over several months. However, I can guarantee an absolute and enduring cure."
Biweekly for several months Mr. Pinchpenny was treated, and day by day his sight waxed stronger and more strong.
"Do you think I'm all right now?" he inquired at last.
"Mr. Pinchpenny," replied the oculist, beaming, "I think I can assure you that your eyes are now cured. But there is one more test it would be as well to apply." Here he held up a little sheet of paper. "See," he said suavely, "if you can read this little bill of mine at twelve inches without blinking."—London Answers.

Recipes For Invisible Ink.
The following are the ingredients of the most common invisible inks: Sulphate of copper and sulphuric acid, equal parts, dissolved in water; writes colorless, but turns yellow when heated. Onion juice, like the last. A weak infusion of galls; turns black when moistened with weak copperas water. A weak solution of sulphate of iron; turns blue when moistened with a weak solution of prussiate of potash and black with infusion of galls. The diluted solutions of nitrate of silver and perchloride of gold; darken when exposed to the sunlight. Aqua fortis, spirits of salt, oil of vitriol, common salt or saltpeter, dissolved in a large quantity of water; turns yellow or brown when heated. Solution of nitromuriate of cobalt; turns green when heated and disappears on cooling. Solution of acetate of cobalt to which a little niter has been added; becomes rose colored when heated and disappears on cooling.

Knew the Wrong Man
It was with a good deal of confidence that he walked up to the magistrate's desk in a Philadelphia station notwithstanding the fact that a policeman had a firm hold on both sleeves. He waited quietly till one of the policemen made the accusation of "drunk and disorderly" and then asked the magistrate if he might speak.
"Yes," replied the magistrate. "What have you to say?"
"Well, judge, I was drunk last night, but it does not often happen. I have lived in this ward nearly all my life, and any one can tell you that."
"Oh, lived here all your life, have you? Do you know any one in the ward that can speak for you?" asked the magistrate.
"Yes," said the prisoner, "I know — He can tell you all about me."
"You know him, do you? Well, so do I. Ten days," was the result.

Justification.
The old dandy had driven his fare to the hotel and was now demanding a dollar for his service.
"What?" protested the passenger. "A dollar for that distance? Why, isn't half a mile as the crow flies?"
"Dat's true, boss," returned Sambo, with an appealing smile. "But, ye see, sah, dat old crow he ain't got free wibes an' ten chilluns to support, not to mention de keep foh de boss."—Harper's Weekly.

He Had.
The kind hearted man had given the panhandler a nickel.
"Haven't you got anything smaller?" asked the panhandler.
"Well, here's a dime; that's smaller," answered the good natured man, displaying the coin for a moment and walking away.—Buffalo Express.

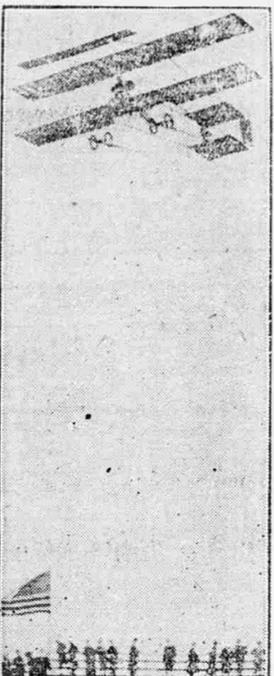

Musical Note.
A thief was lately caught breaking into a song. He had already got through the first two bars when a policeman came out of an area and hit him with his staff. Several notes were found upon him.—London Mail.

PAULHAN'S DARING WORK.

French Aviator Makes Some Remarkable Flights at Los Angeles.
The hero of the great aviation meet at Los Angeles was Louis Paulhan of France, whose marvelous flights and daring work in the air attracted attention all over the world and furnished some exhibitions for those present that they will long remember.
On one occasion the daring Frenchman broke all official and unofficial records for altitude in a heavier than air machine by flying in a Farman biplane at a height of 4,600 feet.

Paulhan also established new world's records in carrying passengers. The aviator's wife was with him on several of these trips, and once they covered twenty-two miles in 38 minutes.

NEW CHIEF FORESTER.

Pinchot's Successor, Henry S. Graves, Well Qualified For Post.
Uncle Sam's new chief forester, Henry S. Graves, is eminently qualified for the post, having received many years of thorough training in forestry in this country and abroad. For the past nine years he has served as director of Yale's forestry school, where he has done much notable work, and previous to this served under Mr. Pin-chot. He is thoroughly in sympathy with the latter's policy of administration and can be depended upon to keep up the progressive work.

It was largely through Mr. Pinchot's efforts that the Yale forestry school was established, and Mr. Graves went from the post of assistant chief of the division of forestry under Mr. Pinchot to become director of the school in 1900. He had served in the forestry division for two years.

SLEIGH LOCOMOTIVES.

Railroads Adopt Novel Plan to Move Freight on Slippery Tracks.
This is a winter of much snow, not only here, but abroad, and the railroads in some sections are having a hard time in moving freight and passengers.
On one of the roads in Germany they turn their locomotives into sleighs when the roads become impassable for wheels, placing runners on the front ones, as shown in the accompanying illustration. This has been of great advantage in transporting freight when much snow is on the ground and has resulted in a big saving of perishable products. The rear wheels of the locomotives are covered with chains in order to make a start possible.

Why Hindoos Don't Go Mad.
Why are there so few lunatic asylums and so small a proportion of insane persons in India? That is a question which many a traveler has wonderingly asked. The Hindoos regulate their lives entirely in accordance with their religion—that is, their working, eating, sleeping, as well as what we usually regard as our "life" in the religious sense of the word. Everything is arranged for them, and they follow the rules now just as they did 2,000 years ago. This constant observance of the same rules for twenty centuries has molded the brains of the race into one shape, as it were, and, although their rites are queer enough, yet there is but an occasional example of that striking deviation from the common which is called insanity in countries inhabited by the white race. They are fatalists too. With them it is a case of "what is to be will be" carried to the extreme. This has in time given them the power to take all things calmly and so freed them from the anxiety that drives so many white men into the lunatic asylums.

Thought It Was the Monkey's.
A diamond necklace was possessed by Mme. Geoffrey de St. Hilaire, the wife of the famous French naturalist. It was one of the chiefest of her "concoctions." As Hindoo women aptly term their jewels. One day madame missed her necklace. There was a terrible turmoil in the house, and all the servants down to the foolish fat scullion were suspected, but in turn proved their innocence. At last it was remembered that M. de St. Hilaire had a pet monkey, and on a search being made in the "glory hole" of the quadrangle the precious bauble was discovered hidden away with a white satin shoe, several cigar ends, a pencil case and a decomposed apple. The renowned naturalist calmly observed that he had frequently seen the monkey playing with the necklace. "Why did you not take it from him?" indignantly asked his spouse. "I thought it belonged to him," replied M. de St. Hilaire. He evidently thought there was nothing unnatural in an ape possessing a diamond necklace as his personal property.

The Monasteries of Tibet.
Every Tibetan family is compelled to devote its firstborn male child to a monastic life. Soon after his birth the child is taken to a Buddhist monastery to be brought up and trained in priestly mysteries. At about the age of eight he joins one of the caravans which travel to Lassa. There he is attached to one of the local monasteries, where he remains as a novice until he is fifteen, learning to read the sacred books and perform the religious rites of his faith. The firstborn son, being thus sent into the church, as we should say in this country, the second becomes the head of the family and marries. Unlike some other semi-civilized races, these young Tibetans have the right of choosing their own wives. Nor can a Tibetan girl be married off by her parents without her own consent. The curious custom in regard to the eldest sons results of course, in nearly every Tibetan family acquiring the odor of sanctity, numbering a monk among its members.—London Telegraph.

Slow but Inexorable Justice.
In October, 1900, Pietro Giacomi and Marie Bonelli were tried at Rome on a charge of sextuple murder by poisoning committed thirty-one years before. In England Eugene Aram was hanged for the murder of Clarke fourteen years after the offense. A man named Horne was executed for the murder of his child in the eighteenth century no less than thirty-five years after the offense. There is also the well known case of Governor Wall, who was executed in 1802 for a murder committed in 1782. Sherward was hanged at Norwich for the murder of his wife after a lapse of twenty years. But Sir Fitzjames Stephens recalls what is the most remarkable case of all. He prosecuted as counsel for the crown in 1863 a man who was charged with stealing a leaf from a parish register sixty years before—that is, in 1803. In this case the prisoner was acquitted.—London Standard.

Prohibited Coffee Houses.
So many coffee houses sprang into existence in England during the reign of Charles II. that he, entertaining a belief that many political intrigues had their beginning in those places, issued an edict ordering them to be closed in this proclamation the following words occurred: "The retailing of coffee or tea might be an innocent trade, but it was said to nourish sedition, spread lies and scandalize great men. It might also be a common nuisance."

Conceited.
Phyllis—Harry is the most conceited man I ever met. Maud—What makes you think so? Phyllis—Why, he first asserts that I am the most adorable woman in the world, the most beautiful, intellectual and in every respect a paragon, and then he wants me to marry him!

Life.
It has been said that life is made up of three things—heredity, environment and the will. If the heredity and environment of the child are what they should be the will will choose the right and do it.

Couldn't Help It.
Mr. Biggs—You must think me a blamed fool, Mrs. Biggs (kindly)—No, I don't think anybody ever blamed you.—Boston Transcript.

Men of loftier mind manifest themselves in their equitable dealings, small minded men in their going after gain.—Confucius.
