A DISAPPOINTED MAN.

The Question Over Which He and the Insurance Agent Split.

Mr. Halloran surveyed the insurance agent with a dark and hostile countenance. The fact that one eye was concealed by a somewhat grimy bandage did not add to the attractiveness of his expression.

"Haven't you made up your wind yet to insure with us?" inquired the agent. "You told me I might call again in a few days."

"There was two of you at me to get an accident insurance policy," said Mr. Halloran, breathing heavily, "I towld you and him both you might call in again, and he come firrst, day befoor yistherday, and I insured wid his company.

"That very night I met up wid Barney Casey on the way home, which was what I was expecting wud happen." continued Mr. Halloran, raising himself by grasping the arms of his chair with two capable although scarred hands, "and whin we'd finish-

An Interview That Made Matters Clear to the Officer.

HE UNDERSTOOD.

"Come, mister, no one can sleep here!" said a policeman the other evening when he found a man lying on a vacant plot of land by the side of the road and aroused him.

"But I have a good excuse," replied the man.

"What is it?" "See that house over there? Well, please to do me the favor to go and ring the bell and ask if William Dock-ey is at home." The officer went to the house, as cended the steps and rang the bell. A head was thrust out of a window.

"Well," said the man on the ground as the dripping officer came up, "you see how it is, don't you? I'm Dockey. That's Mrs. Dockey."

"I think I understand," replied the officer. "You can remain where you are."-London Answers.

Death, Ancient and Modern.

The art of the ancients would certainly seem to show that their conception of death was a much more cheerful one than that which has obtained in later times. It was at one time thought that the old Greeks and Egyptians had no artistic symbol for death, but this was a misconception. Death was almost invariably represented by them as the kinsman of sleep. The Greeks personified it as Thanatos, elder brother of Sleep. The Romans sometimes depicted Death and Sleep as twin children reposing in the arms of Night. The skull and crossbones and the skeleton as emblems of death do not appear to have become common until comparatively late Christian times. It has been suggested that the terrible famines and pestilences which scourged Europe during the middle ages were responsible for the fear or horror with which the modern mind is usually accustomed to look upon

HUGE MOUND AS A STATE PARK.

Historic Relic Purchased by West Virginia.

It Gives Moundsville Its Name and II One of the Most Celebrated and Best Preserved Memorials of the Remains of a Prehistoric Race-Guarded by Heirs of G. S. McFadden For Years.

Standing seventy feet in height and measuring 900 feet in circumference. with trees growing upon its summit estimated to be at least 700 years old, the mammoth mound from which Moundsville, W. Va., derives its name, located on the Grave creek flats, near the Qhio river-the greatest monument of antiquity in the Ohio valley and a tremendous memorial of the aboriginal life of the prehistoric people-has been purchased by the state of West Virmonths is no accident I'm done wid inginia and converted into a public park, surance companies, and the sooner you The legislature of the Mountain I'ave this house the betther 'twill plaze State, following unceasing activity in the interest of the purchase of the mound for twenty years, appropriated $10,000 with which to save the relic from the ravages of modern commercialism. The deed of transfer from G. S. McFadden's heirs to the state of West Virginia was formally executed before the work of beautifying the grounds was allowed to commence. Twenty-five thousand dollars is the price to be paid for the mound. Of this sum $5,000 has been denated by the heirs as a memorial to their father, who preserved the mound for years. A similar sum was raised by subscription by the school children of the state. The last payment on the purchase price is due next October.

Builders of Mounds and "Hill Forts." The mound in question is one of the most celebrated and best preserved of the remains of the prehistoric American race which, for lack of a better name and because of its characteristic habit of erecting these mounds, has become known as the "mound builders." Antedating the Indian, they appear to have been driven by an invasion of strangers-possibly the first Indiansfrom the northwestern part of the American continent in a general southwesterly direction, mounds and "hill forts" marking their retreat. The best remains are found in the Miami and Ohio river valleys. There is a theory that this strange peeople may have migrated into Mexico and formed there the nucleus of the powerful Aztec nation, conquered by Cortes. The mound was first discovered by Joseph Tomlinson of Pittsburg in 1772. The man, one of the pioneer adventurers, journeyed down the Ohio river from Pittsburg in an open canoe. searching for a location for a home in the trackless wilds. Mooring his bark near Little Grave creek, just north of where the city of Moundsville now stands, he toured the country thereabout for a suitable site for his prospective cabin, coming upon the mound, Experiences of Its First Settler. Realizing nothing of the historic value of his discovery or that the mound was anything more than a curious conformation of the earth, Tomlinson, impressed with the region, returned to Pittsburg, loaded his family and his belongings upon a raft and ventured again upon the broad bosom of the Ohio. He was the first settler in this territory and to all intents and purposes the founder of the present cities of Moundsville and Wheeling. Other settlers followed the path blazed by Tomlinson in the wilderness. A small colony was formed north of the location of the mound at a point near what is now known as the city of Wheeling. As a protection against the Indians a stockade that afterward White Cloud and his band of Blackfeet, marched up the Ohio and attacked the home of Tomlinson. His two small sons were slain, but he and his wife escaped to Fort Henry. The attempt of the redskins to take the fort and their ultimate repulse are now matters of history. It was during this battle that Betsy Zane made her heroic run through the line of Indian fire to a storage house from which she se-

A quarter of a century ago the late den served notice that they had held the mound as long as possible and that it would be sold at once. State officials secured an option on the property, later securing from the legislature an appropriation sufficient to warrant the purchase.

THE FINAL POSE.

it Made the Thing Harmonious and Complete All Around.

In the early days of traveling by stagecoach across the Rocky mountains the trip was likely to be relieved of monotony by incidents of no ordinary occurrence. But the fatigue of the journey was apt to wear upon the nerves of the weak and the timid. Sometimes the passengers became so worn out as to lead to a suspicion of their sanity. The Right Rev. D. S. Tuttle in his "Reminiscences of a Missionary Bishop" describes an instance

One forescon the ecach rolled into Denver, and the six horses came praneing up to the office of Wells, Fargo & Co. A large crowd was assembled, as the incoming and the outgoing of the daily coaches were the great events for the town.

At the stop the only passenger quickly threw open the coach door, leaped to the ground, ran hurriedly across the street and, turning a handspring, stood on his head with his heels up against a supporting wall,

Several men followed him, quite sure that here was another passenger crazed by the long, sleepless ride. One said to him in a tone of sympathy,

"Why, cap'n, what's the matter?" Slowly coming to a right side up posture, the man answered: "Well, my friend, I'll tell you what it is. This standing on my head is the only position which I haven't been in during the last twenty-four hours in yonder coach, and I wanted to make the thing harmonious and complete all

A foreigner, especially if he be of prepossessing appearance, is received with great civility at a Chinese bank, "Schroff!" shouts the head clerk. This word is not, as it sounds, German, but a corruption of Hindoo "sarraf," or banker's assistant. In response to this call a native cashier appears, noiseless and deferential, with a smooth shaven skull, a four foot pigtail and a spotless, flowing garment.

A Bit of Correspondence.

The following correspondence, epiing in true Irish fashion, actually passed between two men in England some years ago:

"Mr. Thompson presents his compliments to Mr. Simpson and begs to request that he will keep his doggs from trespassing on his grounds."

"Mr. Simpson presents his compliments to Mr. Thompson and begs to suggest that in future he should not spell 'dogs' with two gees."

"Mr. Thompson's respects to Mr. Simpson and will feel obliged if he will add the letter 'e' to the last word in the note just received, so as to represent Mr. Simpson and lady."

"Mr. Simpson returns Mr. Thompson's note unopened, the impertinence it contains being only equaled by its vulgarity."

the end of a service, "I enjoyed your sermon this morning. I welcomed it like an old friend. I have, you know, a book at home containing every word "You have not," said Dr. Doane.

"I have so," said the parishioner. "Well, send that book to me. I'd like to see it." "I'll send it," was the reply.
