So Sore He Swore; He Swears No More.

SALE.

There was a Merchant mighty sore—In fact, so sore he swore and swore And kept on swearing more and more.

The trouble was that folks, instead Of patronizing him, by Ned! Were buying goods by mail, he said.

One day he got a little hint On how to make his store a mint; The hope took on a rosy tint.

He came and ADVERTISED his stock; His store was crowded, chuck-a-block.

From seven until six o'clock.

So now this Merchant swears no more; No longer is he feeling sore, Since ADVERTISING crowds his store.

Commander Julius A. Pratt, Post No. 143 Dept. Ill., G. A. R. above Post, Kewanee, Ill., writes: "For a long time I was bothered with backache and pains across my kidneys. About two months ago I started taking Foley Kidney Pills and soon saw they were doing just as claimed. I kept on taking them and now I am free from backache, and the painful bladder misery is all gone. I like Foley Kidney Pills so well that I have told many of my friends and comrades about them and shall recommend them at every opportunity." A. McMillen.

THE NELL BUNNELL TRIO.

Three Delightful Young Lady Artists.
Soprano, Violinist, Pianist.

Miss Clare Kvello is a pianist whose solo execution is noted for its strength, firmness, brilliancy and capacity to interpret the poetic conception of the composer. She is always in perfect harmony as an accompanist and the life and vigor of the trio work is in large measure due to the pianist.

Miss Nell Bunnell, who heads the company, is a recognized artist. Her soprano voice has interested at the greatest music masters of the day, but she has steadfastly turned down every offer to go on the stage, although she possesses marked dramatic ability.

Miss Minnie Annette Cedargreen is another member of the company and is a violinist that will some day be known to fame.

FAMOUS SOPRANO SOLOIST COMING TO CHAUTAUQUA

The Nell Bunnell Company Composed of Three Charming Young Ladies.

With a voice and a personality that would insure her a welcome in grand opera, Miss Nell Bunnell prefers to head her own company, the Bunnell Trio, in concert recitals. She has established a reputation that warrants the Chautauqua management in promising season ticket holders an exceptional treat.

Miss Bunnell sings the old sweet songs that we all love. She calls to mind the cradle days of long ago. She is most generous in responding to encores and becomes on cordial terms with her auditors immediately she faces them.

You will enjoy hearing her at Chautauqua.

The essential element of success in the Chautauqua business is the ability to purchase $2,500 programs for $2,000. And this is possible only by handling them in large quantities.

Advance of The Farmers Of America

CONVENTIONS may come and conventions may go, but it will be a long time before St. Louis will forget the recent interesting one held there. This was the great meeting of farmers—the joint convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative union, a southern organization with 3,800,000 members; the American Society of Equity, a northern organization with 2,250,000 members, and nearly 400 subsidiary and affiliated organizations with approximately 1,000,000 members. This meant, therefore, that the delegates were the representatives of more than 7,000,000 men.

Some facts and figures were presented to the convention that will open the city men's eyes. For instance, it is estimated by members of the union that the farmers represented are worth $3,000 each on an average in land alone, making them the joint possessors of the inconceivable sum of $21,000,000,000. In addition to this, they own most of the live stock in the country, including 21,000,000 horses, worth $108 apiece.

Statistics presented also showed that the tillers of the soil are in many lines. The farmers of this country own and operate sixteen big meat packing plants, the members of the Farmers' union own and operate 5,600 manufacturing plants of various kinds, while the members of the American Society of Equity own 4,300 plants.

Six years ago the Farmers' union had no cotton warehouses; now it has 2,000. It had no fruit packing plants; it now owns 500. It had no representatives in the cotton market of the world; now it has a representative in

MAN'S THREE DUTIES.

A Good Husband, a Good Father and a Good Neighbor.

I have made a code for my own guidance which may interest you. I hold that a man's first duty is to be a good husband, which implies, of course, that he ought to marry and then make his wife believe, if he can, that she has been the most fortunate of women.

It isn't easy—but, my, how it pays! He must be lover, husband, son and even father by turns and occasionally just nobody—he must get clear off the earth. But when he comes back—

A man's second duty is to be a good father, which implies, of course, that he ought to have children—adopted, if necessary. He ought to be to them the standard by which all other men are measured and found wanting, because he is their daddy and they love him.

A man's third duty is to be a good neighbor, to carry his share, no matter how small or how great it may be, of the community's worthy enterprises, to share the sorrows and the joys of those around him, to make his home a real asset to his community.

After a man has done these three things, if he has time and means and strength, he can and should think in wider circles. But the man who does these three well is doing more than if he contributed millions and neglected these three. The man who neglects his wife or his children or his neighbors, no matter what other apparently great things he may have done, will hear Gabriel's trumpet very faintly if at all on the morning of the great day.

—Erman J. Ridgway in Delinquent.

When the Mule Kicks.

"No man unless he is blind should ever be kicked by a mule. There is no excuse for it. If kicked he is as much to blame as the mule," said a mule raiser. "A mule never kicks without first wagging his ears and switching his tail," said the breeder. "All you have to do is to keep your eyes on his ears and tail. And when he begins to wag his ears or switch his tail then it is time to dodge. And if you dodge quickly you will never be touched."—Kansas City Journal.

A Cold Bite.

"You were twenty miles from the north pole and starving?" exclaimed the credulous housewife. "And how did you save yourself?"

"Why, mum," responded Frigid Fred as he wiped away a tear, "in me starving moments I remembered de Eskimo dogs. Pushing out through the snow, I twisted one of der tails, an' den—an' den!"

"And then what, my poor man?"

"I got a cold bite."—Chicago News.

THE MILKY WAY.

A Hundred Million Stars Glean In That Silvery Scarf.

The census of the starry sky is concerned almost entirely with the Milky way. The number of stars not connected with it is negligible. But when you look at the Milky way the idea of numbering its stars seems the dream of a madman. It stretches all round the sky. Its extent is so unthinkably immense that science has never undertaken to measure it, and the imagination could not grasp the figures that such a measurement, if it was possible to make it, would involve.

Yet that whole enormous expanse of space occupied by the Milky way is so crowded with stars that they make upon the eye the impression of a silvery scarf wound round the brow of the universe.

It requires a telescope to see them as a broad zone of glittering points instead of an almost uniform band of whiteness in the firmament.

In some places they are more thinly scattered, so that, as you gaze through the glass, you almost think that, with infinite patience, you might count the number included in a space as large as the face of the moon.

But in other places they seem to be packed together like the sands of the seashore. They stretch away over thousands of square degrees of space, hanging in great festoons, spreading out in vast banners, where billions upon billions of cubic miles seem to be filled with stars thicker than the flakes in a driving snowstorm!

There are beegemmed knots in that starry scarf so rich that the eye is dazzled and the mind confused by the spectacle which they present.

Yet science, although it shrinks from trying to estimate the space which they occupy, has succeeded in forming a fairly correct enumeration of the stars of the Milky way.

The most extravagant estimates do not put the number at more than 300,000,000, and the most trustworthy and probable make them a third less.

A hundred million stars, then, is the total population of the glittering universe, and when we see what a marvelous effect of innumerable they produce we begin to appreciate what a hundred millions mean.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York American.

Beatrice, June 7-9, 1910.

Probably thousands of Sunday school workers in Nebraska are now looking forward to the state convention, not that thousands can be there, but because of the general interest in what promises to be the greatest state convention yet held. The program commands the attention of every Sunday school teacher and officer, both in the strength of its speakers and the comprehensiveness of the work taken up.

The general state secretary met recently with the chairmen of the local committees at Beatrice who will have charge of the work of handling this great meeting, and they are fully alive to the magnitude of the task before them. The entertainment committee purposes finding places for 1,500 delegates. Three of the largest churches, centrally located, will be open to the convention's needs for regular and overflow meetings. The Y. M. C. A. will throw open their building to all the men attending the convention, with privilege of baths, reading and writing rooms, etc. The assignment committee is working out plans whereby arriving delegations, however large, can be handled very quickly and with accuracy and precision.

There should not be a Sunday school in the state which is not represented at this convention, which will mark a distinct epoch in Sunday school work in the state.

What Everybody Wants

Everybody desires good health which is impossible unless the kidneys are sound and healthy. Foley's Kidney Remedy should be taken at the first indication of any irregularity, and a serious illness may be averted. Foley's Kidney Remedy will restore your kidneys and bladder to their normal state and activity. A. McMillen.

Iron.

Pure iron is only a laboratory preparation. Cast iron, the most generally useful variety, contains about five per cent. of impurities, and the curious thing is that it owes its special value to the presence of these. Pure iron can be shaved with a pocket knife; impure iron can be made almost as hard as steel.
