 The story of the death of George Kraft, in last week's Tribune was incorrect in one particular—he died in Sheridan, Wyoming, instead of Denver as stated.
 The McCook Junior Normal session closed without formalities, last Friday. The session was unfortunately greatly impaired by the quarantine resulting from the scarlet fever prevailing in the city.
 The dairymen claim that the drying up of pasture lands and the high price of feed are making the dairy business financially hazardous. Some are retiring from the business, selling their cows etc., for the reasons above stated.
 You cannot afford to take any hazardous risk with your hard-earned savings. In times of prosperity there is a great temptation toward speculation. There is absolute security for both interest and principal in the certificates of Deposit issued by the First National Bank.
