Capt. Bogardus again hits the Bull's Eye.

This world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says: "I suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and used several well known remedies, all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I had severe headaches and pains in my kidneys with suppression and a cloudy voiding. On arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and again feel like my own self."

It is intimated that this attack will be launched from some eastern source at a date and in a manner which will make it impracticable to deny the falsehoods and slanders, which will probably have some slight foundation, upon which a mass of deceit and deception will be shamelessly built.

The Tribune refers to this not at all because it fears the result or because there is any foundation for the assault—Hon. C. H. Aldrich needs no defense—but simply to warn its readers to be on guard against this cowardly manner of denouncing character and obscuring the issue.

To be forewarned is to be forearmed.

Dahlman and a Grand Jury.

Mayor Dahlman is going about Nebraska claiming in his speeches that he has enforced the law in Omaha as mayor and that he stands for law enforcement. Here is an extract from a report of the last grand jury that sat for several weeks investigating conditions in Omaha and turned in its report December 4, 1908:

"We regret to report that we find men holding positions high in authority, including the mayor of our city, who in many instances wholly disregard their oath of office; that they make only a feeble or no attempt to enforce laws and frankly admit that they in reality are not honestly and earnestly serving the people."—Omaha Daily News.

Apropos of the Hitchcock incident and the loan from Bartley, ex-state treasurer, by the Democratic editor, it is perhaps enough to say that Mr. Hitchcock's explanation is not sufficient. And it will be no little stunt for the great Democratic editor to satisfactorily explain to the people of Nebraska why he should ever under any circumstances borrow money from a Republican state treasurer, especially at the time he did. It is clearly not sufficient.

There is no gain to the Republican party, to the state of Nebraska, or to the nation, in a vote for Hitchcock. A fair analysis of the course of E. J. Burkett will divulge the fact that there is small excuse for a Republican to vote for Hitchcock, and every fair and reasonable claim for a vote for Senator Burkett for re-election. Let no Republican falter at this important crisis.

The Republican who votes for Dahlman is within his rights as a citizen of Nebraska and may measure up to the stature of a good citizen, but The Tribune is firmly of the opinion that such Republicans are mistaken and that future years, and the immediate future at that, will prove the absolute correctness of this view. A vote by a Republican for Dahlman is more than a political error.

It is evident that Colonel Meecham will not object to receiving the "wet" vote. He has journeyed near enough toward his final reward to know better.

McCune of the World-Herald has been working, this week, in McCook and this section of the state in the interest of his employer Mr. Hitchcock for U. S. senator.

NEW YORK'S ACT REPUTATION

WITHIN an hour after Mayor Gaynor had been shot down by an assassin's bullet it is safe to say that at least half the men in New York give any attention to public affairs and their management had thought of John Purroy Mitchel, the young president of the board of aldermen, who, under the charter, would succeed to the first office in the city if the mayor's wound should result fatally.

And it is equally safe to say that with most of those who thought of him it was a source of satisfaction and assurance that the man in second place was of proved character and ability.

Young Mr. Mitchel may not have quite reached the idol stage in New York city as yet, but he is very near it. And he is there chiefly—in fact, almost solely—because of one achievement.

It is true that that achievement involved several phases. It was the eminently successful administration of the office of commissioner of accounts, which he held for the last two years of the McClellan administration. His success lay in the vitalizing of the of-to men who actually do things. His head is neither large nor small, and it gets a good poise at the top of a long and supple neck. He has a high forehead, broad at the base, with high, arched eyebrows.

Educated at Columbia.

Mitchel was born thirty-one years ago in Fordham. When only twelve years old he entered St. John's college. Later he went to Columbia university, where, by the time he was in his sophomore year, he attracted attention as a speaker and debater. He was a member of the Philolexian society, the King's Crown and the Gun club. In his senior year he won the Philolexian oratorical contest, the most important prize of its kind in the college year. On being graduated from Columbia Mitchel became a student in the New York Law school, from which he received his diploma two years later. Then he entered the office of William B. Ellison, a lifelong friend and the counsel of Mitchel's uncle, Henry D. Purroy.

The break of Purroy with Tammany is a famous story in the history of New York politics. It took place in fice. He found out and used the powers of the place.

Exposed Tammany Graft.

He put energy, vigor and enthusiasm into his work, not to mention a matter of highly specialized and trained intelligence, without which all the rest would have been useless. The immediate and spectacular result was the downfall of a pair of Tammany chieftains who had long been engaged in demonstrating to their political henchmen the pleasing fact that public office in New York under the regime of the tiger was decidedly a private snap.

The more remote but also more substantial and durable result was the public showing that administrative methods in the city would be simplified and made much more nearly if not quite thoroughly honest, with a consequent saving of considerable sums of money to the city taxpayers.

Mr. Mitchel found a great many ways in which petty graft was being levied on the city. He paraded them all before the scandalized if not ignorant eyes of the citizens.

Wise For His Years.

Accompanying each one was a plain and simple chart showing how it was worked, so that even the dulllest and least interested could hardly fail to understand; also he showed in each case the way to bring the graft to an end.

The president of the board of aldermen is a singularly wise young man. He is ahead of his years and his fellows in that respect.

As he walks down the street he would be taken, even by the closely observant, neither for a dude nor a doer. He is well dressed, but not a fashion plate. He stands erect, steps off smartly and is nervously alert to what is going on around him, but there are no doubt thousands of other young men in New York to whom all that applies with equal truth, and none of them has overthrown two borough presidents and been elected to the second place in the New York city government.

He is tall and slender. Thin would not be an inappropriate term of description. The brevity of perimeter probably increases the effect of altitude, but he looks to stand about six feet, and maybe he weighs 150.

It is in the face and hands that there shows the personal force which put him through his years as commissioner of accounts so brilliantly. He has the long fingered, large jointed, big veined hands which almost invariably belong
