The Burlington expects to invest $80,000 in a depot and improvements in Grand Island, Nebraska's third city. The proposed new depot will be located nearer the heart of the town.

Last Sunday, trains Nos. 4 and 11 (daily except Sunday) between Oxford and Red Cloud, were restored to service on practically the old schedules, making continuous local service between Hastings and Oxford, via Red Cloud, as heretofore.

D. Hawksworth, of Plattsmouth, who has been ill, is reported by son Frank as improved in health. D. Hawksworth will be remembered as having been the first superintendent of motive power of lines west of the Missouri river, and one of the old guard.

The section foremen on the Burlington are rejoicing over a substantial raise in salary. However, simultaneous with this action, there was a reduction in the force of telegraph operators of the company. Wray lost one operator in the deal. Instead of three we have now but two.—Wray Gazette.

We were informed this week that work would begin shortly on two long side tracks in the Burlington yards here. One is to extend from the railroad crossing on Chief street east to the limit of the yards or about 4000 feet. The other will be almost as long and will extend from Chief street west. Both will be on the south side of the present tracks.—Wray Gazette.

The Burlington recently placed an order with the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co. for $840,000 worth of steel rails. These will be rolled at the Pueblo mills. It is hinted that some of this order for rails may be used on the Grealey-Hudson extension scheduled to be built this spring. The Burlington's order was for a total of 30,000 tons, divided equally between the Illinois Steel Co., the Lackawanna Co. and the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co.

BLOWN FROM HIS CAB.

Crawford, Neb., Feb. 6.—Burlington flyer No. 43 between Billings and Lincoln had a miraculous escape from a wreck today near Provo, S. D., about thirty miles north of here. Running at a speed of thirty-five miles an hour, a steam pipe in the engine burst, blowing Engineer Wilson through the cab window.

On account of escaping steam and scalding water the fireman was unable to get into the engineer's side of the cab and remained ignorant of the fact that the engineer was not there, while the train thundered on.

As the train passed the spot where the engineer had fallen, Superintendent Robins of the Sheridan division, who was in a private car attached to the rear of the train heard loud cries and thinking some one had been run over, pulled the air and brought the train to a stop.

It was then discovered that the train was running without an engineer. Engineer Wilson was picked up and found to be badly, but not fatally, injured. Another engine was put on at Crawford and took the train into Alliance.—Lincoln Journal.

Drawback.
The Alpine guide waxed eloquent. "Behold," he cried, "yon beetling crags!" "They beetle for everybody, though!" sneered the rich American, and sullenly spat in token of his discontent. It was not true, however, that he lacked appreciation of the beautiful and the sublime, provided these were costly and exclusive.

Mrs. Coyle was born in county Wexford, Ireland, in 1836. Came to America with her parents when she was 14 years of age, settling in Illinois, where she was married in 1856. Her maiden name was Anna Redmond. She came to Red Willow county in 1888, and has since resided here. Three daughters and two sons survive her.

Departed was the mother of 16 children. There are 3 grandchildren.

A requiem mass was conducted at St. Patrick's church this morning at 10:30, Rev. Wm. Patton, O. M. I., celebrant. Interment in Calvary cemetery followed the funeral services, which were attended by many friends from the country and city.

Thomas Coyle, another member of the family, is also in a serious condition, his recovery being doubtful, his illness beginning with the same disease that has proven fatal to the others. Other complications have now increased the chances against his recovery.

The family has the profoundest sympathy of all in this multiplication of bereavements and sorrows.

Return Engagement of "The House of 1000 Candles."

After the first performance of "The House of a Thousand Candles" in New York, the management requested the opinions of several of the most famous theatrical stars who were present at the play. The following is a summary of the opinions gathered:

Miss Julia Marlowe says, "The dramatic sense is grasped instantly and portrayed with perfect artistic simplicity."

David Warfield: "The vivid dramatic quality, combined with its romantic adventure, makes the play one of the most interesting I have seen."

Arnold Daly: "Mentally it is brisk and bracing."

Mrs. Leslie Carter: "Rarely have I found a play so absorbing."

Blanche Bates: "I enjoyed the play because of the Americanism of its characters, plot and scenes."

And Mr. E. H. Sothern said: "The plot is original and strong in dramatic conception, developed with ever-growing interest to a striking climax."

From the above it would seem that "The House of a Thousand Candles" was keenly enjoyed by this brilliant first night audience.

The original New York production will be the offering at the Temple theatre on Thursday, February 23d.
