CINCINNATUS IN SKIRTS A NOTABLE IN COLORADO

COLORADO hails a Cincinnati in petticoats in the person of Mrs. Agnes L. Riddle, recently elected to the legislature in that state. The only law in the comparison is that Mrs. Riddle has not "left" her "plow" and still keeps in touch with farm duties when not legislating.

Many women have been honored by election to the legislature in Colorado since the adoption of woman suffrage eighteen years ago, but with few exceptions they have been, like their brother lawgivers, of the machine made variety. The three other women elected to sit with Mrs. Riddle in the house of representatives have no unusual characteristics. One has for a number of years presided over the destinies of a small family hotel. Another is a professional politician, who has secured a "job" for her husband through her allegiance to the "organization." The third has won laurels as a "worker" and has been rewarded by the Denver Tammany.

These women, like most of their predecessors, are residents of Denver. As is the custom, to conciliate the women voters three of the eleven places given to Denver on the legislative ticket were assigned against a man. They were not pitted against a man, as was Mrs. Riddle, who was nominated on the Republican ticket in a farming district which was normally Democratic. Adams county, the largest county in the district, went Democratic by 600 votes, but gave Mrs. Riddle, the Republican candidate, 370 votes.

Up Before the Lark.

This sturdy German woman, who has spent the last twenty years of her life on a dairy farm, is the most picturesque figure seen on the political horizon of Colorado in many years. Since her election as a legislator Mrs. Riddle finds it necessary to precede the lark by several hours in the matter of early rising. At 3 a. m., according to her daily schedule, she is busy preparing breakfast for dairy hands. At 4 she serves them at table. Five o'clock finds her cleaning up the breakfast debris and planning and preparing luncheon for her family and help for their consumption at the noon hour, when she must be absent at the stables.

By 6 the shining faces of the children are made ready for school, and an hour later she speeds them on their way equipped with books and luncheon baskets in search of education. Seven o'clock is the appointed hour for outlining the day's duties for her employees. Dobbin is harnessed by 8 to a light buggy, and the woman solon starts on a six mile drive from Glendale to Denver, where from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. she takes a hand in molding the affairs of state.

Six o'clock is the hour designated for the evening meal at the Riddle ranch, and Mrs. Riddle is always there to aid in its preparation. At 8, after the children's hour, they say their prayers and are put to bed as in any well regulated household.

In addition to her duties as housewife and legislator, Mrs. Riddle has been secretary of the state grange for six years, and she frequently rounds out the routine of her daily chores by attending to the duties required of her by that organization, which she has seen grow from twenty circles to fifty-four, with a membership of 4,000 farmers.

Her position as secretary places her in practical control of this body of ranchmen and keeps her alive to their interests and progress. It would be regarded as extraordinary for a man to do these things. What kind of woman is this who can compass them so satisfactorily to all concerned?

Has Never Been In Jail.

She is not a brilliant suffragette. She has never saluted a policeman in the eye with her strong right or prostrated a cabinet member with an uppercut. She has never been in jail. She is just a modest, unassuming, right thinking hausfrau who has by hard work secured a practical education. When a little child in Germany she sat up far into the night and studied by candlelight, wrapping the book about the candle to keep its light from being seen. Through the grange she gained a knowledge of economic questions and, as is natural in a suffrage state, dis-

PUNTA ARENAS SEES LOSS.

Southernmost City of Americas Dreads Panama Canal Opening.

Anxiety is being felt at Punta Arenas, Chile, the southernmost city of the world, over the possible effects of the opening of the Panama canal on traffic through the strait of Magellan.

All vessels passing between the east and west have been accustomed to stop at Punta Arenas to coal. The town, which has a population of 12,000, paved streets, large stores and many public improvements, has thrived particularly as a result of the ocean traffic which may be diverted to the canal.

African Railway Earnings Increase. The earnings of the South African railways for the seven months since the union exceed by $5,000,000 those of the preceding corresponding period.

cussed political problems with her husband.

Mrs. Riddle, in common with all truly worthy characters, has an aversion for the personal pronoun I, but she yielded the other day.

"I was born in Silesia, Germany," she said. "I attended High Daughters' college before I came to this country, at the age of sixteen. My first efforts to become naturalized resulted in two years' study of domestic science in St. Louis. After that I entered a training school for nurses and when I received my diploma took up the active service of my profession.

"Then George Riddle came wooing and winning me away from my chosen work. Twenty years ago I came to Glendale a bride and since that time the dairy farm has been the center of the universe to me.

"I have not known the joy of tying baby shoes for my own children, for no little ones have been given to us, but I have raised a family of ten," said the stateswoman. "I have taken to my heart and home the children of my two sisters, one of whom died, leaving a family of four, another leaving six. I have tried to do my duty by them, but they are beginning to grow up now, so I will have time for new interests. While I never aspired to public office, I have been interested in world affairs since my girlhood, when my father held official position in Germany, and I am glad to have the opportunity to work for the betterment of the farmers."

Carried Democratic District.

Mrs. Riddle represents Adams, Arapahoe and Elbert counties in the Eighteenth general assembly of Colorado. These counties comprise an area as large as the state of Rhode Island. She drove all over her district during the campaign, talking plain politics to her constituents, and was entertained at nightfall at the home of a friendly ranchman. When the votes were counted in this Democratic district Mrs. Riddle's personal popularity gave her a very comfortable majority.

Although Mrs. Riddle belongs to the minority party in the house, the members of both parties never lose an opportunity to show their respect for her opinions upon the subjects in which she is interested. They regard her as authority upon scientific reforms for the farmer. She has demonstrated that she is a practical woman by the program she made out for herself and which she hopes to see put into effect while she is in the legislature.

As a member of the advisory board of the State Agricultural college she understands its needs and its methods, and she advocates an appropriation for that institution which shall provide for a corps of teachers who shall travel about the state to teach the farmers' wives and daughters as well as the farmers the simple lessons of sanitary living and nursing and who shall also teach them how to relieve the dreary monotony of ranch life by harmless social pleasures.

Such a course of training, Mrs. Riddle believes, will check the mad rush of the boys and girls from country homes to the pitfalls of the city.

Advocates Cream Testing.

Another hobby of Colorado's remarkable woman legislator is the establishment of a bureau of cream testing. According to Mrs. Riddle, each county should have a supervisor or inspector to look after the cream testers. She claims this protection in behalf of the farmer, who receives only 14 cents for the gallon of milk for which the dairyman gets 35. This injustice, it is said, is due to the cream tester, whose decision is final. This condition of affairs is driving men out of the dairy business in Colorado and favoring the shipment of milk from Kansas. Mrs. Riddle hopes by proper legislation to right this wrong.

The other members of the legislature may not know that this quiet but determined woman with ideas has not waited for any one to set her a good example, but has taken the initiative on the anti-pass question and has promptly returned all the passes she received at the opening of the session.

The advocates of woman suffrage taking stock of Mrs. Riddle's good qualities are triumphantly pointing to this vital German dairywoman with a talent for politics and are proclaiming her "the woman of the hour" in Colorado.

"HANDS DOWN!" BANDIT'S CRY

Wants Women's Plumes and Fears Hatpin Jabs.

"Pietro, the plume snatcher," has made life miserable for the young women of Minneapolis and St. Paul. He has made life miserable and their hats worse, for forty dollar willows have been snatched with as little emotion by the "plume snatcher" as the ordinary ten or fifteen dollar kind.

The victims have always had to keep their hands down, for the bandit is afraid of hatpins, so instead of "Hands up!" he calls "Hands down!" as he points a deadly looking revolver.

Wear Cotton, Don't Produce It.

The provinces of Yunnan and Kwangsi, China, have a population of about 8,000,000 each. Very little cotton is produced there, while the use of cotton clothing is universal.
