METHODISTS HAVE 2 BIG DAYS

n Danbury-Visiting Members From Lebanon and Marion-Danbury People Entertain Visitors-Everybody Pleased.

Feb. 11, 12. These two dates will long be remembered as the most inspiring of all the year and the most inspiring of many years past.

Rev. Harvey Anderson the pastor of the Methodist church here seems to have a new way of doing things. The new way has been counting for great good in this town and will continue to count for good. He says that he wants to know the good that is in man and that is all.

Rev. Anderson was his own evangelist during the recent revival and preached clean evangelistic sermons. He has not once in all the meetings dealt in personalities. He loves all men alike.

Forty-six were converted during the recent revival.

The second quarterly conference of Danbury circuit was held at Danbury on Saturday and Sunday. The Rev. J. Walter Morris D. D., the district superintendent of Holdrege district was here and presided over the conference at a business session on Saturday afternoon. Dr. Morris inform ed the conference that there were as miany people present at the conference as there were many times at a district conference. He spoke very encouragingly of the work of the charge. He informed the conference that the work of the charge would make many city charges look sick.

After the business meeting was over a program, composed of recitations and song, was rendered. At six o'clock Saturday afternoon the Ladies' Aid society gave a banquet free of charge to all who might come. The majority of town people were present. Everybody was welcome to the banquet. Rev. Anderson was toast-master. T. C. Crebben was called on for a toast, "Why Do I Go to Church?" Rev. Parren of the Congregational church told about 'John Rockefeller in Church;" Prof. Clarendon was called on for "The Effect of the Revival On the School." Miss Millie McDonald gave a recitation ending: "The men get the toil and sweat and the Ladies' Aid gets

In the evening the Rev. J. Walter Morris, D. D., preached a timely sermon, which was well received by an appreciative audience.

Sunday morning was filled with good things and the people were well pleased with the program. Sunday afternoon found the people of Danbury and the visitors assembling together ready for the program. Rev. Parren of the Congregational church helped in the program of the afternoon. After a warm and spiritual devotional meeting the laymen of the charge were given the right of way and there were some sound and practical addresses made. After the addresses there were several who took part and discussed the same thing which had been spoken of by the speaker on each subject.

"The Christian Among the People" was very well handled and each one who took part on the subject left a it. These ladies did the subject justice and made the audience feel that they knew a few secrets of a christian life and could tell them. The subject of "How to Help the Pas tor," was open for all. tor by going down in our pocket and paying up the salary. He showed that people were paying out more than $2,500 for lodge dues and about $700 for church in Danbury per year. He told that he belonged to lodges, but made it very clear that man ought to be as willing to help the churches which saved from sin through the preaching of the gospel.

Mrs. Stilgebouer remarked that we could help the pastor by keeping still and not tell all we could against the preacher, even if it was the truth, for anything which is told to hurt the influence of another was slander and sin. Rev. Anderson replied to the remark and said that several former pastors had been hurt so far as influence was concerned by unkind remarks from people in Lebanon, Danbury and Marion. Many more remarks were made which space forbid repeating.

After songs and recitations the following subjects were handled with skill and ease: "The Christians Who Have Helped Me Most," by W. A Stone. Everybody knows this man and they call him "Will," because of his big honest heart and life. The audience heard a business man tell of how some christians in the audience helped him most. He was followed by several more who left a good influence.

Rev. L. Cann was called on to address the conference on "The World's Debt to Methodism." The old veter- of the revolution, who is in America an struck the key note of Methodism and the audience saw Methodist in the true light.

After recitations and a hymn by the audience the communion service Madero forces have already captured took place. At this hour it may be called "A Twilight Communion Service." The service was very solemn and many new converts took of the sacrament for the first time.

Sunday evening was filled with good service and after Epworth League service the district superintendent preached to a crowded of the revolution's most spectacular house and left a gospel sermon to achievements, at Guerrero, Cerro linger with the soul of those who ! Prieto and Malpaso. heard him.

The district superintendent expressly conference was one great feast to able to hit a dime every time with a investigators, undertaking scientific inall who attended.

Mallery and two children, Mrs. G. B. McLennan, Miss Nellie Book, Misses Alta and Ilah McCarty, Lovel More, Russel Penning al governor of Chihuahua last Novemton, Miss Ruth Waugh Ira Overstake, ber Orozco became his personal escort. Maxwell Ralsten, Miss Nellie Osborne Ferris Hupp, Gail Overstake. There were a few more, but in the mixing of the crowd our reporter was unable to get their names.

The visitors from Marion were M:r. and Mrs. Wicks, Mr. and Mrs. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. C. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Darnell, Mr. and Mrs. M. Rodabaugh, Mrs. J. W. Pepper, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Yeater, Miss Nellie Yeater. There were several others which the reporter did not get.

The Danbury people opened their homes to the visitors from the neighboring towns. They made the visitors feel that they were welcome.

The visitors were well pleased and so expressed themselves. Everybody was anxious to do their part. The Congregationalists and the Christian homes were open to all visitors as well as the Methodists. The spirit of brotherly love was shown by Dan bury people and the visitors went home feeling that the Danbury people knew how to treat their neighbors. They did what they knew to do.

All who attended the conference were well pleased and wished that they could have such meetings often. The visitors were very anxious to have their church take up the same plan and have the program carried out at their church.

There were many tired bodies who left with a spirit of good cheer and brotherly love. The conference was planned by the pastor and it was a success from start to finish.

OROZCO, HERO TO HE INSURRECTOS

Mexican General's Juarez Operations Cap Lively Career.

STANCH MADERO FOLLOWER.

Son of Chihuahua Ranchman, Thrown Into Rebellion Against President Diaz, Proves Most Daring and Resourceful of Opposition Leaders. Noted For Ability With Rifle.

The unexpected and sensational descent on the border city of Juarez by Mexican insurrectos commanded by General Pasquale Orozco stimulated interest in the rebellion against Diaz. This was particularly true of the United States, as Juarez is just across the Rio Grande river from El Paso, Tex., and is joined to it by the huge international bridge which Presidents Taft and Diaz dedicated. Since horse racing has been abolished in Texas the American promoters have moved to Juarez, which has emphasized its importance as the most important Mexican town on the Texan border.

Gustavo A. Madero, the younger brother of Francisco I. Madero, leader to secure aid for his brother, declares the rebel army is made up of 12,000 earnest men, armed with modern Winchester rifles, while the government has only 24,000 apathetic soldiers. The eight small towns and have organized bands in ten states. He praised Orozco's Juarez maneuvers.

Praise For Orozco.

"Pasquale Orozco, one of the youngest and bravest of my brother's generals, is responsible for this," he said. "Orozco, since the war began in November, has been the leader of three

"He never met my brother, but when the latter last summer was touring Mexico making speeches Orozco became enthusiastic over his idea, and when the revolutionist commander Abraham Gonzales became provision-Gonzales was a brave man on the field, but at Guerrero two months ago he lost his nerve. The town had been captured by the revolutionary army after a fourteen day siege. The federal troops made their last refuge a block of houses in which the families and Mrs. Blake, Mrs. Webber, Mr. of many revolutionary sympathizers also lived. Gonzales said he wouldn't blow up the block, and it seemed as though the federals were going to re main intrenched there interminably. "While Gonzales was thus hesitat ing Orozco jumped out in front of the revolutionists and cried that the block must be blown up and that he was willing to take the responsibility for doing it. He asked if the men would follow him, and in the wave of excitement which followed the revolutionists said they would let him be their leader thereafter. The block was blown up and the town fell absolutely into the hands of the revolutionists.

Proves Skillful Leader. "Orozco has been the official leader of the revolutionary forces of Chihuahua ever since and has proved worthy. At the battle of Malpaso, which occurred a few weeks after the fall of Guerrero, he enticed the federal troops into a canyon and ambushed them, killing and wounding 250 He afterward permitted the federals to take their wounded from the field Among the wounded was Colonel Guz man, leader of the federal forces. He died a few days later in a Chihuahua hospital. Before he died he said, "l have only one regret, and that is that I have never been able to shake hands with my opponent, General Orozeo, the bravest man and the ablest gen eral that I know.'

"Just before the engagement at Mal paso occurred the battle of Dark Hill (Cerro Prieto), at which Orozeo turned what might have been a disaster int a splendid victory. General Navarro a federal commander, with 450 men. was marching through the province looking for revolutionary bands. Orozco, with only thirty-five men, was fol ments, so he disguised 150 of his men in the uniforms of the revolutionary army and sent them to meet Orozco

"Orozco and his men were at first deceived. When the two forces were within 150 yards of each other Orozco saw he had made a mistake. Instead of galloping off he and his men sprang from their horses and, getting behind them, retreated slowly, firing. They retreated thus for eight miles. Orozco lost twenty-five of his thirty-five men, but the federals killed were far more.'

Hollweg has steadily lost favor with the emperor recently owing to his lack of tact. The emperor has informed several members of his court that the chancellor would be invited to retire immediately after the next reichstag elections next autumn. At the same time the emperor left no doubt that the next chancellor will be Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter, who now is the imperial secretary of foreign affairs. He observed:

"Kiderlen is tactful, energetic and not boorish. He will do."

Kiderlen himself mistrusts his luck, which seems too sudden. Two years ago when an intimate friend told him low county, Nebraska. that he would become foreign secretary Kiderlen said:

"Nonsense; the emperor hates me." The same friend told him recently that he is destined to be the next chancellor. Kiderlen no longer doubted the truth of his friend's informa-

DANIEL BOONE A HIRELING?

Professor Says He and Clark Were Land Grabbers' Pawns.

Dr. C. W. Alvord, professor of western history in the University of Illinois, in a lecture under the auspices of the Sons of the Revolution of Louisville, Ky., shattered the hero worship of the early leaders of the Kentucky pioneers by saying that George Rogers Clark and Daniel Boone were merely pawns in the hands of huge land grabbing concerns.

By implication Professor Alvord connected Patrick Henry with Governor Dunmore, who he said inspired the Indian war resulting in the Clark expedition. Although he did not connect George Washington or the Lee family and other influential Virginians directly, he showed wherein they were greatly benefited personally by the war.

SHEEP HAS SEVEN COLORS.

Texan Offers Specimen to Mayor Gaynor of New York.

A man in Texas wants to sell Mayor Gaynor of New York a sheep with wool of seven colors. The offer came in a letter received from Udo Toepperwein of San Antonio, who suggests that the sheep might be a valuable addition to the zoo.

He writes that the sheep came from the mountains of Mexico, that he sheared it twice and that the wool each time was of the same varied coloring. He will not ask the city anything for the sheep if after the next shearing it fails to reproduce its spots.
