A Long Credit. The motto of the highland host that battled for the Stuart cause, which bonny Prince Charlie headed, appar ently was that heaven helps those who heip themselves liberally. They levied toll on the henroost, stable and, according to the author of "The Land of Romance," even on the pockets of the Covenanters.

At Swarthholm a party of these marauders overhauled the house of a tai lor, and when one of them was about A sister of Mrs. Chas. King from to cut up a web of homespun that had taken his fancy the good wife earnestly remonstrated. "A day'll come when ye'll ha' tae

"An' when will she pe hating to do that?" he asked.

"At the last day," said she. "An' that will pe a fery goot long credit," the robber coolly returned "She wass going to pe only taking a coat, but now she will pe taking a waistcoat as well."

A Mountain In the Sky.

Somewhere many miles away from this earth an enormous mountain twenty miles high is flying through space. The mountain is known astronomically as the planet Eros. The ordinary man has long taken it fer granted that all the planets are more or less round in shape. The small planet Eros, however, is an exception to this rule. According to the latest astronomical information, it is a mere mountain in space, "without form and void," and as it turns upon its axis first one corner and then another is presented to view. These small worlds (few are over ten or twenty miles across) are not large enough to have sufficient gravity to draw their structure into symmetry and remain as when launched into space-mammoth meteorites. A tantalizing fact for astronomers is that Eros passed very close to us about Jan. 24, 1894-before the planet was recognized-and that quite so near an approach is not due again till 1975.

"The Mine's Blown Up." I was sitting on the edge of my bed, loosening the heel of one of my rubber boots with the toe of the other, when suddenly through the stillness of the sleeping town, from the power house half a mile away, came a low and rising note, the great siren whistle in the and more shrill and died away again. The Indianola and McCook debating One blast meant a fire in the town, two blasts fire in the buildings at the mine and three blasts, the most terrible of move, but there was a sudden coldness that came over me as once more, for the third time, the deep note broke out on the quiet air. Almost instantaneously the loud jingle of my telephone brought me to my feet. I took down the receiver. "The mine's blown up," said a woman's voice.-Atlantic.

Saying No.

The author of "Pat McCarty," a book of verse with a setting of prose, shows how naturally some of the Irishmen of Antrim dilute the wine of narrative with the water of verbiage. In the excerpt below-"The Way We Tell a Story"-the diluent is used with a particularly free hand:

Says I to him, I says, says I, Says I to him, I says, The thing, says I, I says to him, Is just, says I, this ways. I hev, says I, a gre't respeck For you and for your breed, And onything I cud, I says, I'd do, I wud indeed. I don't know any man, I says, I'd do it for, says I,

As fast, I says, as for yoursel'. That's tellin' ye no lie. There's naught, says I, I wudn't do To plase your feyther's son, But this, I says, ye see, says I, I says, it can't be done,

The Spectacled Bear. The spectacled bear of Ecuador is so called because of a patch of white around each eye, which makes the animal look as though he was peering through a pair of great spectacles. In size and general color the spectacled bear looks not unlike the American black bear. But its hair is very shaggy. At each side of the head is a white bar, which gives the animal the appearance of wearing a halter. But that?" the most distinctive feature is the white around the eyes.

The schoolteacher was trying to illustrate the difference between plants and animals. "Plants," she explained, "are not susceptible of attachment to man as animals are." "How about burs, teacher?" piped a small boy who had passed the summer in the country.-Chicago News.

Stories of the Paris Courts. Among humorous stories of the Paris law courts it is told how a well known lawyer, M. Alem Rousseau, was once pleading a rather tiresome case and, noticing that the judges were paying no attention to him, said, "As the president is falling asleep I suspend my speech." But the judge had just woke up and cried, "And I suspend you from practicing for six months." Nothing daunted, the lawyer retorted, "Well, I suspend myself forever and ever," and gathering up his brief and cap. left the court and never appeare tin.

A Paris barriste Clery, however, was more vigore ... Seeing that the president and the assessors were all asleep, he stopped, and, dealing a tremendous blow on the desk in front of him that woke everybody up with a start, he cried, "Yesterday at this same hour I was saying"- And the whole bench rubbed their eyes and asked cach other if they had really slept through twenty-four hours.

The same counsel was pleading at Versailles on a cold day and remarked that the judges were all turning more and more around toward a stove that gave out a welcome heat. "The tribunal behind which I have the honor of speaking" brought them all right about face at once.

He Had a Claim. In a certain town was a young lawyer whose father was very rich and who had been sent to an eastern law school. Since his graduation he had done nothing except open an office because he had plenty of money. This young lawyer was proposed for membership in the local fire company.

"We cannot elect him," one of the members protested. "The constitution of our company says that the members of it must sleep and live here in DR. R. J. GUNN the city, and he lives out of town on a farm and not in the city at all. He would be of no value at all in case of a fire at night. He doesn't sleep here at night."

"No," replied his proposer; "it is true he doesn't sleep here at night, but he sleeps here in his office all day." And they elected him on that ground. DR. J. A. COLFER

The Simple Maid.

'Twas in a simple country town, and the maid of all work was simple and innocent in sympathy. When she returned from shopping half a sovereign short in her change Mrs. Mango-

Chutney was naturally incensed. "Go back to each shop, you careless girl," she told the weeping maid, "and tell them you are half a sovereign give it you." Susan went and was back again in half an hour. Entering her mistress' sanctum, she laid five half sovereigns DR. EARL O. VAHUE on the table before her. Faithful as always, she had carried out Mrs. Mango-Chutney's instructions to the letter, and each shopkeeper, fearful of doing wrong and hurting a fellow creature, had thrust the missing coin upon the bewildered girl.-London Answers.

The Offending Black Bottle. A church member in a lonely district of Saskatchewan absented himself from services for some months. On being approached on the subject he said he was sorry, but it was impossible to attend any more. He was pressed to give reasons and at length of the superintending clergyman and catechist. He and others had witnessed them drinking when driving round on their visits. They had passed a black bottle from hand to hand. It was impossible to attend the ministry of such men. Inquiries proved that the offending "bottle" was a pair of fieldglasses with which the drivers surveyed the surrounding country and tried to locate the various churches, shacks and trails.—Sunday at Home.

Not Always. "Whenever I hear the suffrage combated," said an English lord, "on the score of woman's protected, sheltered, petted life I think of a poor woman I once questioned in England. "This poor creature had been beaten by her husband in a drunken fury. The man had been drunk, it appears, for ten days running.

"'My good friend,' I said to her, 'does your husband always drink like "'No, my lord,' she answered. 'Sometimes I gets hout o' work." A Witty Retort. An Englishman in Dublin was asked by an Irish cab driver if he wished to ride through the city. "No," replied the Englishman; "I am able to walk." "Ah, well," remarked the jehu, "may yer honor long be able, but seldom willing!"
