Origin of Dukes.

The word duke comes from the Latin "dux," a leader. In early Saxon times the commanders of armies were called dukes—i. e., the leaders of the soldiery. In other words, the first duke was the first best fighting man. No regard was had to ancestry or present attainments or any other sort of thing beyond the simple matter of warlike efficiency. Naturally the leader of the fighting would when the fighting was over come in for the lion's share of the spoils and "honors," and naturally again the rest of the folks would "look up" to him, and by degrees his superiority would be imparted to his family, and a "nobility" would spring into being. It all rested, to start with, on brute force and animal courage combined with cunning in clubbing and thrusting.—New York American.

Colored Hailstones.

Red hail is not unknown, even in Great Britain, for in May of 1885 there was quite a heavy fall of it at Castlewellan, in County Down. Red and white fell together, and the red hue was not merely on the surface of the pellets, but went through and through. When one was squeezed between the fingers it stained them.
At Minsk, in Russia, an even stranger hail shower had fallen five years before. Some of the pellets were ring shaped, and, while some were distinctly reddish, others were a bright blue. Some scientists declare that the coloring is due to various mineral salts.

A Feeling Allusion.

Teacher—Tommy, how many is about something he said he saw at the horse races, but I know better," confided the recently chastised small boy to his chum. "He saw 'em right here, and they're my ma and pa."
"What did he say?" asked the chum. "He said he saw a spanking team."
—Baltimore American.

Long and Short Division.

Teacher—Tommy, how many is the half of eight? Tommy—On top or sideways? Teacher—What do you mean by on top or sideways? Tommy—Why, half from the top of 8 is 0 and half of it sideways is 3.—Exchange.

BLACK SCHOOLGIRL OF 70 WINS TWO GOLD MEDALS

Led Her Class and Was Late Once and Then Only Three Minutes.

The proud wearer of two gold medals from the New York board of education for merit in study and attendance in the primary department of public school 157 is Mrs. Martha Harmon, who was born in slavery in Kentucky seventy years ago.

For four years this schoolgirl has been learning her three R's, and she takes great pride in the tokens she has received showing how diligent her work has been and how in all that time she never missed school and was late only once and then only three minutes.

When she questioned the principal and the teachers they thought she was getting information for one of her family. They gave her the facts as to enrolling and answered the timid question she finally put as to the age requirement of pupils.

They had no idea she meant herself when they told her that the only qualification necessary was a desire for education. Then she astonished them by asking that her name be put on the list.

"You?" they said. "Why, you don't really mean it, do you?"
"Yes, I mean it," she answered. "I'm only sorry that I didn't do it years ago. But if it ain't too late now, why, I want to learn all I can."

So she was put in the first class of the elementary department, and she has followed the course steadily since, being promoted with the rest of her class and showing a real proficiency in her studies, though the teachers had expected to indulge her, thinking that the long disuse of her mental faculties might have dulled them.

But instead of lagging she led. That's why she got the gold medal for her work. And her sense of punctuality was on a par. In the worst storms she put on a heavy coat and old fashioned mittens and trotted to school with her books under her arm. She is absolutely unconscious of the fact that she is doing anything unusual. She doesn't think that at her age she has outlived her usefulness.

Mrs. Harmon was a girl when her people took her into Ohio, where slavery was taboo. She lived in Dayton, and it is said that her name was taken from the family of Judson Harmon, the present governor of Ohio.

HE HANDLED BILLIONS.

Late George Marlor Once Counted $2,000,000 in Ninety Seconds.

George W. Marlor, cashier and assistant treasurer of the United States subtreasury at New York, a veteran of the Seventh regiment's civil war roll and for forty-six years attached to the Wall street stronghold of government funds, is dead.

Mr. Marlor has handled billions of dollars of American money, probably more money than any man who ever lived in the United States, and his deft fingers held many records for speed in counting bills. Once he counted $2,000,000 in notes in ninety seconds. The $10,000,000 purchases of gold from the Bank of England or the Bank of France that sometimes came under his jurisdiction when the gold was brought to the assay office were merely small routine matters to him, and he handled them with as much ease and freedom as though they involved nothing more important than the purchase of a pound or so of tea.

With other folk's money, in spite of his haste in passing it along on its mission, Mr. Marlor was a particular person. Let a counterfeit one dollar bill find its way into the realm of the financially elect, and his trained hand and eye picked it out from its legitimate fellows with unerring accuracy. His sense of touch was so acute that he could tell the good from the bad instantly without looking at the face of the bills.

$10,000 IDLE FIFTY YEARS.

Now Woman? Seeks to Collect on a Certificate of Deposit.

Mrs. Julia Richardson Leonard has a certificate of deposit on a Trenton (Tenn.) bank for $10,000 nearly fifty years old, and is now making an effort to collect the money. The certificate was given to her by a brother, J. L. L. Richardson, the deposit being made Jan. 23, 1863.

Richardson was a Union soldier and died soon after the deposit was made. He said nothing about the certificate of deposit, and it was found among his belongings some time later. He was a member of the One Hundred and Twenty-second Illinois infantry. He enlisted in 1863 and the same year was returned to his home to die. How he came into possession of the $10,000 which he deposited is not known.

Mrs. Leonard, who was the payee of the certificate of deposit, was at that time sixteen years old. She came into possession of the certificate as soon as it was found among her brother's possessions, but made no effort to draw the amount from the Bank of Trenton. The question of the incorporation of the Bank of Trenton, which may have undergone some change of incorporation after the war, and a question in regard to the kind of currency which John Richardson deposited are to be considered. If it were Confederate currency it would have been good in 1863, but worthless in 1865.

Four Generations Gathered.

Four generations are gathered at a reunion at the home of Frank Harris and family, 609 North Fourth street, Colorado City. L. Harris of Galesburg, Ill. is visiting his son, Frank, and the presence of the latter's daughter Mrs. O. J. Simons, and her two children, make up four generations.

The old gentleman, who is in his ninety-second year, was born at Royalston, Mass., on March 6, 1820. He is cheerful and pleasant, gets around easily and sleeps well. He has seldom suffered a sick day, and enjoys life generally.
