

PAUL BEACH DROWNED

The Boy Goes in Bathing and Drowns in a Deep Hole.

About two o'clock yesterday afternoon, the telephone announced the drowning of Paul Beach, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Beach, who live in Frontier county, a few miles from Box Elder, this county.

It seems that Paul was repairing a fence in the neighborhood of a deep pool of water in a canyon on the Beach farm, and went into the pool swimming. The water proved to be quite deep and he quickly sank to his death. Two little children witnessed the drowning and carried the sad news to the mother at home. Mr. Beach was in McCook at the time and immediately started for home.

Help was summoned from the neighborhood and the body was with some difficulty recovered from the hole, about an hour after the accident. Dr. Duncan and Rev. McBride went to the scene in an auto, but death had done its work.

Services were held at the farm this afternoon at one o'clock, conducted by Rev. McBride of the Baptist church of our city, and the body was afterwards conveyed to McCook for burial in the cemetery.

The Tribune expresses the sentiment of a large circle of friends in McCook and country in extending to Mr. and Mrs. Beach and family the profoundest sympathy in this great and tragic sorrow and irreparable loss.

The Wages of Sin.

Considerable attention has been paid in the newspapers to the story of Henry Clay Baettie, Jr., the young Virginian, who is accused of the murder of his young wife because of his infatuation for another woman. The prominence of the families of the young man and his dead wife have lent more than usual interest to the case and since the tragic death of the young woman, revolting details of her husband's life that would not have otherwise been heralded country-wide have been given extensive publicity.

Some of the plain facts in the case have been prettily tinted with romance by clever writers, but the story after all is one of sin, and sin sooner or later stands out boldly in its own sordid ugliness. In spite of the fact that young Baettie belongs to one of the aristocratic families of Virginia, if the theory of the case which now seems most plausible is proved correct, he is guilty of a most heinous crime. All the glamour of romance that has been draped around the case will be flimsy covering for the plain blunt facts and the other details of his wild young life will not tend to palliate his offense.

Centuries ago it was written, "The wages of sin is death," and the years that have intervened have not changed the truth of that statement, unless it should be to add "and its perquisites are disgrace, sorrow and broken hearts."—Salina Journal.
