

GARLAND STOVES AND RANGES

STOVE BUYER WARNINGS

Facts No. 3

Caution
Garland Stoves and Ranges always bear the above trademark. Sold only through reliable dealers. Never sold by Mail Order or Catalog House.

FACTS, plain facts, are often hard to tell without hurting somebody's feelings.

But, as agents for Garland Stoves and Ranges, we have no desire to do that—no quarrel with any Mail Order Stove Concern or Catalog House.

It is stove buyers for whom we have facts worth considering—practical, profitable facts whenever you are thinking of buying any kind of a stove or range.

Buy Where You Can See What You Get—At HOME

We do not say this selfishly. We only ask that you investigate Garlands before you buy. That's all. We are glad to rest the matter on your judgment then—when you see our full line of latest style Garlands for every purpose to suit your needs.

Quality

For over 40 years Garland stoves and ranges have had the greatest sale of any stove and range in the world—in over 4,000,000 homes. Garland Quality is not more than stoves and ranges of inferior grade. So why not secure The World's Best?

Service

Permanent economy in buying any stove or range should be considered not only from its first cost, but also from the point of view of durability, fuel economy and workmanship. Garlands are the world's best for baking, cooking or heating and do each with the least waste of fuel.

MOUTH A SOURCE OF DISEASE

Many Ailments Are Due to the Fact That It Is Not Kept Clean.

It is only within the past few years that we have begun to appreciate the necessity of a clean mouth. True, we brush our teeth, and make occasional visits to the dentist, but the absolute necessity of a clean mouth as a preventive of disease has not been impressed upon us, until recent times. Now we know that often it occurs that a person may take medicine for years for an internal disease, when the true source of the trouble lay at the front door. The mouth presents one of the most favorable fields for the invasion of microbes into the body, and if unclean, and with cavities in the teeth where food may lodge and decay, he is fortunate indeed who escapes serious trouble.

The danger coming from an unclean mouth arises from two sources. The swallowing of pus, germs and decayed food along with the saliva, and the fact that, with diseased teeth, we are unable to chew our food properly. It is needless to enlarge upon the amount of danger which comes from the swallowing of poisonous substances along with our saliva. We know that these substances are not only harmful, but that the effort to counteract the effect of these poisons weakens the body. If this were all, it were enough, and yet the inability to properly chew our food under these conditions renders the problem more serious. If the teeth are decayed they become sensitive, and a person will unconsciously refrain from chewing on a sore tooth. As the condition becomes aggravated, good chewing becomes impossible, and the habit of bolting the food is formed.

Now, it is all right for a chicken to bolt its food, because there is arranged for the chicken internal apparatus for afterwards grinding the food. Man, however, has no gizzard, and this habit of bolting our food not only causes excessive strain on our digestive apparatus, but also impoverishes the blood, and thus weakens the system so that it cannot ward off the disease.

That this condition is serious there can be no doubt. Examinations made of the teeth of children in the schools of New York, and some of the cities in the western states, show the percentage of dental decay to be as high as 85 per cent. About 50 per cent. were found suffering from malnutrition, directly due to their inability to properly chew their food.

PROFESSIONAL MAN'S IDEALS

Earnest Study and Conscientious Effort to Keep Abreast of the Times Bring Success.

To deserve and earn the respect and good will of his patrons, friends and fellow practitioners is the first aim and object to the professional man who strives for the best. He endeavors to improve himself, render more efficient his efforts, more useful his operations, more painless his procedures more active his brain and more deft his fingers. He is constantly reaching forward, not satisfied with today, but hoping to do better tomorrow. He eagerly seeks information, grasps quickly that which is beneficial, and useful, and adopts it. He keeps in touch with all that is new and novel in the literature of his profession. He anticipates with extreme pleasure the meetings of his local, state and national associations and faithfully attends such as he is able to, carefully reading all published literature relating to those from which he is unavoidably absent. He pays fraternal visits to his professional brethren and notes with satisfaction that in almost every instance he receives and imparts desirable and useful information. He scans the advertising pages of the journals in quest of whatever is novel and frequently learns of something that will, if adopted and made use of by himself, be of benefit to his practice. He peruses with much satisfaction the printed discussions following the reading of papers and essays, and often finds them far more interesting and instructive than the papers which called forth the discussion. He adopts every method that seems to promise better results.

By such careful and conscientious attention to his profession he is bound to succeed, slowly perhaps at first, but none the less surely. His foundations are built upon rock and cannot be shaken loose, and as his superstructure gradually rises he notes with satisfaction its beauty as well as its utility. It moulds itself to his own character, and becomes a portion of himself. His very earnestness will attract patrons to him, and of the very best obtainable class, who as long as he cherishes and nurtures his ideals, will remain steadfast to him. This is much more satisfactory to his inward self than where dollars and cents are the sole consideration. He feels that he is useful to humanity and that he is, in his humble way, assisting in forwarding the plan of world advancement.

And thus he goes forward, he sees better things ahead, perhaps, at that time, considered unattainable, but with earnest efforts he is able to reach and pass beyond them to others still more difficult of access. Perfection is always still further in advance. It should be his aim to make his profession a study and leave it better for his having entered it.
