THEY'RE ALL ALIKE

Ask any man past fifty years of age and he will tell you of some time in his life when he was sailing high. Things were coming his way. There are few exceptions. Why is he poor now? Well there are various reasons. One thing is sure. It is not because he placed his money in a sound bank and checked it out only when safe investments were secured. There are more ways to lose money than to make it. If you are making any money, no matter how small the amount, start the saving habit by opening a bank account.

AVOID HARSH DRUGS.

Many Cathartics Tend to Cause Injury to the Bowels.
If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it with the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called Rexall O'berlies. These are prompt, soothing, and most effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery. Their principal ingredient is odorless, tasteless and colorless. Combined with other well-known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a tablet which is eaten just like candy. They may be taken at anytime, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do not gripe, purge, nor cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons and aged people, as well as for the most hearty person. They come in three size packages, 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain them only at our store—The Rexall Store. L. W. McConnell.

ANIMAL HUSBANDRY COURSE AT UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA

Complete Courses Offered in All the Various Stages of Live Stock Management--Animal Judging a Strong Feature of the Department.

(By Howard Gramlich, Class of 1911, University of Nebraska.)

NEBRASKA is pre-eminently a live stock state. In the eastern part, where farming is quite largely practiced, the crops which are grown are those suited to be marketed through live stock channels. In the western section where the rainfall is light and the soil is inferior in many places, the country is adapted to stock grazing. As a result of these conditions, it is to be expected that animal husbandry should form one of the main branches of agriculture in the state university. To meet these demands, complete courses are offered in all of the various stages of live stock management. Under this heading we may class live stock feeding, breeding and management as well as very comprehensive study of the veterinary side of the subject. And, of course, along with these studies must go the animal judging, which at this institution is one of the strong features of the department.

Upon the station farm there are upwards of two hundred head of cattle maintained. Many of these are kept primarily for the judging classes. Of the total, there are about eighty head of experiment cattle, which are used in feeding tests, comparing the different feeds grown here in the state to ascertain which is the most economical to make gains on beef animals. About fifty head of breeding beef cattle are maintained, including specimens of the various popular breeds, namely, the Shorthorn, Aberdeen Angus, Galloway, and the Hereford. Many fat steers are maintained for the judging classes and to show at the live stock shows of the country. These, of course, represent pure breeds and grades, as well as cross breeds of the various beef breeds, and comprise the best specimens which can be obtained. The dairy department has approximately seventy head of cattle. These are used for the classes in judging under the animal husbandry course. It is customary in conducting a judging class to have a group of four animals led into the judging pavilion. The members of the class are then instructed as to how to handle the an-

THE NORTHERN FLICKER.
(Colaptes auratus luteus bangs.)
By John T. Zimmer, Department of Entomology, University of Nebraska.
One of the largest of our common woodpeckers is the Northern Flicker, or golden winged woodpecker, as it is also sometimes called. In coloration it is brownish above, with bars of black and a paler brown below, with round spots of a darker color, a black crescent on the breast and a black "moustache." The rump is white and shows conspicuously when the bird is flying.

NORTHERN FLICKER.
From you, while the lining of the wings and tail is deep yellow and can best be seen also during flight. Like all other woodpeckers, this species builds its nest in cavities of hollow trees, with the opening at a greater or less height from the ground. It likes also to find a resonant limb or trunk and beat a rolling call on it with its bill. Its most characteristic notes, however, are a rapid, prolonged "it-it-it-it—" and a more leisurely "wick-up-wick-up-wick-up—." Besides these it has a call, or alarm note, which is the only one uttered during the winter months. Although belonging to a family of tree-inhabiting birds, the Northern imals and how to score them. They get down among the animals and go over them very carefully, scoring them upon each point. When they have completed they foot up their score and that tells them which animal is the best in the lot. This is very practical work and is work which is very popular with all of the students.

About two hundred head of hogs are kept upon the farm, including specimens of the various lard breeds. Breeding stock and fat barrows are available to use in the judging classes. There is quite a large flock of sheep kept upon the farm which is used in the judging classes to demonstrate the various types. Pure breed mares have been purchased for use in the class room, and the work-stock is also available for use in the classes. Near the farm is located a large horse importing establishment, which furnishes stallions for use in judging. In the feeding class, the common foods are taken up and discussed. A thorough study and analysis is made of each, and the instructor explains the various uses which the body has for the constituents of each food. Balanced rations are studied and the students are taught how to balance up feed in the proper proportion to best meet the needs of the animal. In the veterinary work, the student receives instruction which enables him to treat the more common diseases of farm animals; many of which oftentimes cause large losses, which might be avoided by a little extra care and precaution. In the study of animal breeding, the theory and practice are both considered and some time is spent in going back over the work of famous live stock breeders. The various laws which have been developed concerning animal breeding and the study of and their operation is also noted. Each fall the fat steers are taken to Chicago, where, at the great International Stock show, they compete with cattle from other states and from Canada. Each season a great many prizes are won here by these cattle. They are then returned for use in the classes.

Flicker is found as much on the ground as it is about trees. Its food, on that account, is varied from that of other woodpeckers. Almost half of it is composed of ants, a lesser portion of other insects and small animal forms, and an intermediate amount of vegetable matter. This latter consists, for the most part, of wild fruits, some of which are in the nature of pests. Very seldom are cultivated fruits touched, and then it is usually cherries which are taken. The lesser amount of insects include injurious species, such as grasshoppers, weevils, caterpillars and grubs of various kinds. The ants, however, form the favorite diet and at times the entire one. They are of numerous kinds and probably not all injurious, but some of them at any rate are responsible for the spread of certain of the plant-lice, such as the corn root louse, and others, often enter houses and become troublesome pests, so in destroying creatures of this kind the Flicker certainly accomplishes some good. When all is considered, then, although this bird is more or less neutral in its food habits, the balance of judgment seems to be in its favor instead of against it. It should therefore be classed among our beneficial species and given protection, even though it may be sometimes caught stealing a cherry or two.

Now that the winter feeding is beginning, more farmers are separating milk and hauling cream to town. When the test of the cream varies from time to time there is likely to be a suspicion in the farmer's mind of the honesty of the creameryman. There are many things which may make the test vary, such as a slightly different speed of the separator, difference in the temperature of the milk, or the adjustment of the machine. Do not be too hasty in suspecting the dealer of crookedness.
