$4,500 Verdict in Blunt Case.

A verdict of $4,500 was returned by a jury in district court late Friday afternoon for the plaintiff in the case of Jesse Blunt against the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad company. Blunt asked for $15,000. The verdict was for injuries received when he fell from an engine that started suddenly. Blunt was a fireman.

At the time the accident occurred Blunt was filling the sandbox on the engine, which was standing on a sidetrack at McCook, Neb. The engine was started suddenly, as he alleges, without warning, and Blunt was thrown to the ground from the running board, injuring his knee. The defendant claimed that the bell was rung before the engine was started. The accident occurred on March 21, 1908. Blunt resides at Plattsmouth, Neb.—Lincoln Star.
