

To Fight Tax Case

The county attorneys of the state met in Lincoln Tuesday to confer with the Attorney General concerning the defense to be made to the actions of the Burlington and Union Pacific railroads have brought in the United States court to restrain the county treasurer from collecting the tax levied against these railroads under the new revenue law. It was determined to have Norris Brown, deputy attorney general fight the cases and to authorize him to employ any and all needed assistance. While Mr. Brown has not made public the name of his assistant, it is generally understood that he will employ Ex-Chief Justice Sullivan. In the hands of these two lawyers, the tax payers may rest assured that the case will be ably defended.

Mormon Proselytes.

A number of individuals are distributing mormon literature at the homes of this city. The literature seems inoffensive and quotes freely from the scriptures. The practice of this sect is said to be quite foreign to the tracts which it distributes, and that many recruits are obtained throughout the country because of the inoffensiveness of their teachings. If any of our stray dogs desire an intimate acquaintance with this gang of proselytes we hope that no tender hearted citizen will interfere.

An Up-To-Date Shoe Store

The following taken from the Verdon Vedette in regard to Hall & Greenwald's Shoe Parlor of this city is only a small part of the many good things that could be said of this popular place. Starting in business not quite four years ago they have by fair dealing, courteous treatment and up-to-date business methods succeeded in building up a trade and a reputation second to none in the county, and the following is only a just tribute to this worthy firm.

"While in Falls City recently we had occasion to visit Hall & Greenwald's shoe parlor. To say that we were surprised at the general appearance of the store room and stock would be putting it mildly. The first feature that attracts the prospective purchaser is the superb window display. The arrangement of the various sizes, shapes and styles is equal in taste and elegance to that displayed by the most up to date metropolitan shoe emporium. Window dressing has become an art, and this well known firm keeps abreast of the newest ideas with marvelous exactness. Another point that is particularly noticeable in this store is the scrupulously clean and neat appearance of the entire stock. System is one of the watch words of the "Shoe Parlor." The stock is arranged in such a careful and systematic manner that to place any pair of shoes in the house in the customer's hands is but the work of a few seconds. Messrs Hall and Greenwald are what might technically be termed shoe specialists. Their widespread acquaintance with all of the leading manufacturers and jobbers of footwear, together with their practical knowledge of the leather trade, and general business acumen, makes it well nigh impossible for them to buy anything but the cream of the out put of the shoe making industry. Their business methods enable them to buy goods at a reasonable discount from which their customers receive the direct benefit. The shoes in this store bear the names of half a dozen of the best firms on earth. The stock embraces a large variety of shoes. There is the tiny little creation of kid and silk for baby; the dainty slipper of the latest shape for sister; the sturdy school shoe for brother; warm, comfortable lined and unlined shoes for father and mother; the tough, hobnailed brogan for the laborer; the finest patent leather footwear that society demands, and a complete line of the best rubbers obtainable. Hall & Greenwald have added heavily to their already large assortment of fashionable hoisery and are rapidly gaining a big trade in this department.

before the good roads meeting was timely and practical. Mr. Abbott has evidently given good roads legislation much thought and consideration. His remarks on this occasion were the basis of discussion and his idea will probably be the nucleus of legislative action.
