Falls City's Needs.

Falls City is a mighty good town, but it can be made a great deal better.

What it needs is a little more enterprise and a little less knocking.

What is the matter with a Saturday afternoon band concert?

Why can't we have seats and resting places in the court house square?

Why not let the rural telephone companies do business here? Many farmers will cut out the mail order houses if we show them we are willing to do the fair thing.

Why not stop the gambling here, not by appealing to the governor and thus advertising our present immorality, but by making the proper complaints to Mr. James, the county attorney? James has shown a disposition to measure up to the duties of his office and is one law officer who is not bound hand and foot by anti-election promises.

The Tribune feels that all lawful business should be encouraged so long as it remains a lawful business and is conducted in a lawful way. We do not feel, however, that gambling, which is an unlawful business, should be permitted in this city. That there are gambling rooms here nobody dares dispute. The law officers of this city have taken an oath to enforce the law. Why don't they do it? It will help our town; it will make it a more inviting place for people seeking a home in which to rear and educate children. It will make Falls City a good place in which to live.

These are among Falls City's needs.

Will someone please invent a bugless porch light?

If you know of a friend or neighbor who does not take The Tribune, give him your copy this week and ask him the question: Is it worth a dollar a year?

The Tribune believes that the county board did just right in giving the News the tax list. It is the paper representing the majority of the board, and does the work for one-half the money the law would give it. If the time comes, as it surely will, when the board is republican, The Tribune will expect and will doubtless be given the work. The poor newspaper man is entitled to some consideration, and we are glad that the board has done the right thing with the tax list.

The candidacy of V. G. Lyford for regent is meeting with an enthusiastic reception, not alone in Richardson county, but through the state at large. Letters have been received from some of the most prominent politicians and university men in the state promising their assistance and co-operation. The southeast corner of the state sends more than its full proportion of students to the state university, and it has never had representation on the board of regents. The time has come for this corner to be recognized and Mr. Lyford is eminently fitted to be the candidate through whom recognition will come.

Never in the history of Richardson county has there been a crop prospect equal to the present. A drive through the several precincts in the east end discloses the most wonderful view that anyone could desire. Corn is king, and during this season is the worst tyrant extant. The farmers are giving the monarch the proper attention, however, and the winter will find Richardson county in a more prosperous financial condition than ever before in its history. The Tribune predicts for the Falls City merchants the best trade they have ever had, for the Richardson county farmer more of comfort and enjoyment than has been his lot heretofore. "For these and all thy blessings may the Lord make us truly thankful."

A street fair is a consummate nuisance, of course, but it is lots of fun for the children. There is something about the glare of lights, the hoarse voice of the barker, the moving crowd that appeals to a child. While the management of the company now exhibiting in Falls City is everything that could be desired, and has given the people a clean entertainment, this is probably the last street fair that Falls City will see. They are going out of date. Cities like Beatrice, Hastings and Grand Island refuse them the rights of the principal streets, and charge them as much as $1,000, to show on the back streets. Falls City will eventually do the same, and these miniature Coney Islands will pass us up. Then will the voice of the speaker and the hot tomalio man pass into silence unwept, unhonored and unsung.

CHOLERA INFANTUM

Child not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the daughter of E. N. Dewey, of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale at Kerr's drug store.
