We have been seriously contemplating the advisability of giving our views on the pass evil. We will now lay down this broad proposition that the railroads have no legal right to issue free transportation to any one, not even an employee unless when they carry him to his work.

Two aspirants from one precinct for office of county clerk is only another evidence of the publican material in East Muddy precinct for any office. Some think it is an evidence of a republican scrap, but I assure you this is not the case. Any man has a right to aspire to their honors and I assure you it will be a friendly contest. We are only sorry that there isn't two clerks to elect instead of one, or we would try awfully hard to land both.

If we violate the law by playing baseball on Sunday are we good citizens? Or can we be good citizens and not be lawabiding? If we allow Sunday desecration by ball playing or otherwise will it not weaken our ability to enforce a due observance of other wholesome laws? What moral or legal right have we to permit one man or set of men to violate the law by playing ball on Sunday, and then punish another man or set of men for robbing a bank? If the law is obnoxious repeal it. But while it is on the statute book let it be enforced.

Press Notes.

There are six and a half millions of acres of corn in Nebraska, and it is all doing tolerable well, thank you.—Fairbury News.

Not a great deal is being said about it in the newspapers but the truth is the candidates for county offices are buttonholing lickety-split.—Fremont Tribune.

It is said the railroads are ready for the crop and are plentifully supplied with cars. Mandy fetch the hammer; I want to nail another lie.—Verdon Vedette.

About as profitable a business as can be found now, since the czar's peace conference and the organization of the Hague tribunal, is the operation of a powder mill.—Fremont Tribune.

There is just one consolation in the probable return of hoop skirts this fall. In case of dire necessity they can be used to crib a part of the bumper corn crop that the Nebraska farmers are anticipating.—Tecumseh Chieftain.

The boycott is an unfair, unreasonable and un-American measure and for these reasons seldom, if ever, results in advantage to those who invoke it regardless of the excuses good or bad, which may be made for its attempted exercise.—Nebraska City Tribune.

Lawson says the thing that impressed him most on his western trip was "the terrible earnestness of the people." They were probably thinking of the time they were wasting on him when they should have been getting in their crops.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

In some states the law requires new statutes to be published in two newspapers in each county. By this means every citizen of the state may have knowledge of the laws. Such a plan should be adopted in this state, and we believe it will be adopted at the next session of the legislature.—Columbus Telegram.

It is somewhat of a problem with the Nebraska banks to know what they are going to do with all the money when the grain crop is sold. Most of them have more money now than they can loan, and nearly every farmer in the country has a surplus stored away besides what they have in the banks. When banks cannot loan their capital and deposits, business with them is not good. It is when the people generally are borrowing that banks are most prosperous. In this section of the country, a great many farmers are running little banks of their own, loaning to their less fortunate neighbor; and this year's grain crop will put some more of them in the business.—Sterling Sun.

A smile has lightened many a burden and caused many a sad heart to be glad. While a frown has caused many a heart ache and added its weight of woe to life's burden. Smiles cost as little as patent medicine samples and should be distributed as liberally. Frowns cost more than their weight in gold, and no scales have ever been manufactured of sufficient weighing capacity to determine the weight of woe one frown may cost.—O'Neill Independent

Everybody knows President Roosevelt means it. There is no suspicion that he is playing to the galleries. That is why they like him. He is always consistent and entirely independent. No other man could imitate him nor act his part. A "square deal" is what a very large majority of the American people want and they believe they will come as near getting it at the hands of the president as conditions will admit. It means equal protection equal accountability before the law regardless of condition, color or prestige. No man is too big to obey the law and no one is too small to enjoy its protection. There is nothing visionary nor impractical in that. He has no foolish theories nor ideas. He believes the government, the constitution and the laws are good enough and he proposes to enforce them as far as humanly possible. It is a simple creed and a very popular one with honest people.—York Times.

What We Did Last Year.

The official figures for the fiscal year ending June 30 show amazing industrial activity and progress, our foreign trade reaching the tremendous total of $1,636,000,000, and exceeding the total for the preceding year by nearly $200,000,000. In foreign trade we lead the world, Great Britain only excepted.

The notable fact is the growth of our exports, which last year rose above a billion and a half, while the figure of imports was $1,000,000,000. The trade balance in our favor was over $400,000,000. In the case of British foreign trade the imports exceeded exports by $855,000,000.

Even more suggestive, so far as our exports are concerned, is the rapid increase in merchandise. While exports of American agricultural products are increasing in total value, it does not increase so rapidly as merchandise exports. We are rapidly sending more manufactured articles to foreign ports. There is an actual decrease in the value of export breadstuffs which used to be our chief export staples.

In other words we now consume more of our foods and other farm products at home. More people are employed in producing wares to be sold in other countries. We are already a great manufacturing nation, able increasingly to compete with the greatest industrial nations in the markets of the world.

Yet our natural resources are only beginning to be utilized.—Lincoln Star.
