Conference week is a great week so far as the service of the Lord is concerned but the chickens have found nothing in it to crow about.

The "water democrats" tried to hold a convention last week, but were compelled to adjourn by reason of the lack of numbers. Not many of that brand left.

Soon the hoarse call of the wild duck will be heard in the land and the muffled boom of the gun on the low lands will proclaim that the summer is over and the harvest ended.

A prominent democrat said when he heard of Lyford's nomination. "The office will introduce to the state a man much bigger than the office to which he aspires. I hope every democrat in the county will support him."

Jake Tanner has fully recovered his health and will in a short time begin his campaign for Treasurer. Jake as county clerk was a very obliging and efficient officer and as Treasurer will serve the people honestly and capably.

Mr. Bolejack of Dawson in speaking to the Stella convention about Will Alexander said, "he is a republican who votes the republican ticket." The statement coming from the man who uttered it and concerning the man of whom he spoke, created a marked impression on the delegates. A republican who votes the republican ticket is our kind of a republican.

Governor Mickey, Attorney Gen. Brown, Land Commissioner Eaton and Supt. McBrien turned in their railroad passes as soon as the anti-pass plank was made a part of the republican platform. This is a good move and demonstrates that republican platform pledges mean what they say. The Tribune takes some credit to this county in the anti-pass movement as Samuel Lichty, a populist, was the pioneer in the movement. It is no small thing to be in advance of a reform movement; one may be called a crank and other contemptuous names, but the end when attained is worth all that it costs.

The office of county judge is a very important office; the most important in the county. The responsibility of estate matters wherein the rights of widows and orphans and entrusted to the judge, require the most thoughtful consideration of the voter when he comes to cast his ballot. A county judge should be honest, capable, experienced and efficient. Judge Wilhite was not a candidate for the position; he repeatedly announced this fact to his friends. Notwithstanding the position taken by him the nomination was voluntarily tendered him by the convention because he possesses to a large degree the essentials necessary for the office.

ECHOES OF THE STATE CONVENTION.

The state convention held in Lincoln last week marked an epoch in the political history of Nebraska. The republican organization had come to the parting of the ways. Two roads were open to it, one the smooth and easy pathway of railroad domination; the other the sometimes difficult passageway to the rights of the people. The convention was forced to choose, and upon its choice depended its right to existence as a party organization.

The rank and file of the party wanted a new deal and a square one at that. The day of special privileges had reached its close. The railroad element fought as it has never fought before. Every pass distributor, every railroad hanger on was in attendance, as a delegate if such were possible, but in attendance in either event. Every effort known to the practical politician was exerted, every scheme known to the ingenuity of a trained politician was brought to bear in the attempt to destroy the hopes and desires of the great mass of men who love their party because of its traditions and its principles.

But absolute and complete failure was the portion of the corporation element.

The hopes of special privileges are as dust and ashes.

The corporations agreed to choose between Duffie of Douglas, and Ames of Lancaster. The independent delegate staked his hopes on Letton of Jefferson. It was generally understood that an agreement had been effected between Duffie and Ames that the candidate receiving the largest vote on the second ballot should receive the solid strength of both candidates on the third ballot. The second ballot disclosed Duffie to be the stronger candidate. This was the signal to make Duffie on the third. Lancaster, through Judge Holmes its chairman, cast its solid strength of 66 votes for Duffie. Then there was something doing. Senator Burkett came on the stage of action. Not the Senator Burkett you and I used to know. Not the young man with smiling face, seeking the line of least resistance, but a new man, one you and I had never known. His face was as white as paper and his black eyes were blazing. In an instant he had developed into a leader as he challenged the recognition of the chair and said, "I am a delegate from Lancaster county, I have a right to cast my own vote and I demand a poll of the delegation!"

No more dramatic situation can be imagined than that produced by the words of Senator Burkett. A theory that had been brooding for years had developed into a condition. The hour had struck and the man appeared. He stood white and determined as the crowd surged about him. The tumult was beyond description. History was being made. The dominant political party of the state was demanding a right to live by asserting the rights of the people. A Delegation was being cast by the railroads without reference to the choice of the delegates. Burkett's demand was granted and a poll of the delegation gave fifty votes to Letton and sixteen to Duffie. Thereafter it was easy sailing. Letton was nominated after the most strenuous fighting ever known in a republican convention. The people had triumphed. Corporate influences had received their death blow at the hands of the republican party. Judge Letton in his speech of acceptance said, "I shall mete out even handed justice between the litigants of this state. I shall know neither corporation nor individual."

This shall hereafter be the platform of the republican party: "Justice between all men and all interests, special privileges for none."

V.G. Lyford was nominated for regent of the state university.

No delegation ever had a better candidate to work for; no candidate ever had a better delegation to work for him. Every man contributed to the splendid result attained. There was no duty too arduous for the Richardson County delegates; they worked together as one man to a common end. Judge Jessen and Will Hayward of Otoe, Dick Neal of Nemaha, George Sheldon of Cass, together with Pawnee county turned their delegations over to Richardson to be used in the interest of Mr. Lyford, and with these votes as a basis an organization was effected which resulted in a combination between Fred Abbott of Columbus and Lyford and the nomination of both candidates.

No better ticket has ever been placed before the people of this state. No convention was ever closer to the people than the one held last week. The party stands committed to the interests of the common people. Railroad domination has been thrown off; the pass, the rebate and unjust rate discrimination are condemned in the platform. Every republican should be proud of his party, and should encourage its independence by giving the ticket nominated the largest vote in the history of the state.

The World-Herald with its usual truthfulness said in a recent issue: "The new dispensation in republican politics is built upon the support of the Northwestern railway, and its leaders include Senator Burkett, R. B. Schneider, Ross Hammond, Congressmen McCarthy and Hinshaw, C. B. Dempster, Samuel Rinaker, Frank Reavis, Judge Jessen, William Hayward and H. Harrison." For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain commend us to the World-Herald. The republican party in state convention called for a new deck and new dealers. It does not pose as an anti-monopoly party; it has no fight on capital legitimately employed. It does not shy from a corporation because it is a corporation. It merely declares that railroads, not one railroad but all, must stick to the railroad business and permit the people to run the politics without corporation influences being exerted. The Lincoln News in speaking of the above quotation says: "As to the gentlemen whom it names as leaders of the new dispensation, it is at fault. The principle that almost every one of them is fighting for is freedom to run for office in this state without first getting permission or making application to railroad headquarters in Omaha. Whether they seek leadership or not is a question with which we have not to deal, but suffice it to say that the independence and cleanness of these men ought to make leadership from any or all of them welcome in this state. None of them take orders from any center of political activity, and the fact that they are banded together in a common cause is a very good thing for that excellent cause."

To see Geo. W. Holland get the Lancaster county delegation by the scruff of the neck and pull it over the dashboard into the Lyford band wagon was worth going miles to see.

In assigning the credit for the determined and unequivocal stand taken by the republican party in the recent state convention, it would be manifestly unfair to overlook the untiring labors of Harry Dobyms, editor of the Lincoln News.

"I had been troubled with lame back for fifteen years and I found a complete recovery in the use of Chamberlain's Pain Balm," says John G. Bisher, Gilliam, Ind. This liniment is also without an equal for sprains and bruises. It is for sale at Kerr's drug store.

A Plain Duty.

Regardless of politics it seems the plain duty of every Richardson County voter to cast a ballot for V. G. Lyford for Regent of the state university. The office, while possessing no remunerative value, is one greatly sought by men who desire to be of distinctive service to the commonwealth. A Regent bears the same relation to the university that a member of the school board does to the local school. Richardson County sends a large number of students to the university, in fact there are but three counties in the state which send larger delegations. We were entitled to the place given Mr. Lyford by the state convention. His election is assured, but the voters of this county should be for him without regard to party affiliations. No man better qualified was ever nominated for the office, and his service to the state will reflect credit on the county and redound to the benefit of the university.
