Every creature ever created was born under sentence of death. Other things may or may not transpire, but this sentence is sure of execution.

If you are not a subscriber to this newspaper we would be glad to have you become so. A dollar puts your name to the good until January 1st, 1907.

The supreme court made short work of the Tucker jury law. The case was submitted at eleven o'clock a. m., and the law found unconstitutional before the noon adjournment.

The merchant who tells you what he has for sale and publicly announces what he is asking for is the merchant you can trust. No man makes public those things of which he is ashamed.

Congressman Pollard has his hands full of postoffice fights. Shubert has a hot one on hand and Verdon is brewing one. Patronage is the curse of a congressman, and a strong man is required to properly use it.

The heads of several great railroad systems constituting an advisory board have solemnly declared that the President's railroad rate policy is antagonistic to the best interests of the people. Sad isn't it.

Every true republican seems agreed on the proposition that the only thing to be done is to remain true to the faith, to nominate the best material in the party and to trust to the good judgment of the voters for success. It is better to suffer a thousand defeats than to run away from the battle. It is greater to deserve success than to attain it.

Among the many resolutions every man makes the 1st of January is that of living more economically the next year. It is sometimes hard to convince some people that a dollar saved is as good as a dollar earned. If you are one of the wise men who appreciate this fact, we beg leave to call to your attention the claims of The Tribune as the newspaper that prints all the news for a dollar a year.

Falls City has considered its own interest in the solution of the telephone muddle. The writer has talked with many of the subscribers to the mutual companies and with one accord they have declared their intention of showing their appreciation of the consideration given them by making Falls City their trade headquarters. This is as it should be and The Tribune is very proud of the part it has played in the creation of a better feeling between the local merchant and his natural customer.

Have you been doing good work this year without proper appreciation? Don't be discouraged, the public will find you out in its own good time. If it doesn't, the satisfaction of a duty well performed makes the game worth the candle. Your ability will be discovered however, don't worry. This is the age of the man who does. The world needs him and seeks him assiduously. You will get what's coming. Remember what Emerson said—"If a man can preach a better sermon, write a better book, or build a better mouse trap than his neighbor, though he built his house in the woods, all the world will make a beaten path to his door."

There was something appealingly pathetic about the Thanksgiving exercises in the primary room of the schools last week. Each little chap had a piece to speak, and each piece told of the turkeys, pies, cakes and other good things about thanksgiving that are so attractive to a child. Judging from appearances it is reasonably certain that many of the little speakers were telling of good things that they were not to enjoy. That as they stood before the school telling of the great smoking turkey and the pumpkin pie, their minds were full of the sorrowful thought that thanksgiving might mean that to some of their school mates but it had never meant that to them. Poverty is not a crime but it has made sad the hearts of many children and denied them some of those things which go to make childhood glorious.

A Strong Display.

One of the strongest newspaper display advertisements that has come to our notice recently is that inserted by the Chamberlain Furniture Co. It is a 14 inch double column, divided into five panels, on each one of which appears in display type an announcement of some extensively advertised commodity such as Globe-Wernicke bookcases, McDougall kitchen cabinet and Karpen leather furniture, for which this firm has sole agency. With such a select array of advertised goods, it is no wonder that Cincinnati people have the impression that everything worth having in the furniture line is to be found at the Chamberlain corner, Cincinnati Daily Doings.

This ad must have been the counterpart of the ad of Reavis & Abbey that appears on page seven of this week's issue of The Tribune. This firm likewise has the sole agency for these goods which are generally recognized as standing in a class by themselves.

Judge Cohoe Under Arrest.

Judge P. Cohoe or "Jay" Cohoe, as he is commonly called, was arrested on Tuesday charged with the grand larceny of $2,000 belonging to Joe Albrecht, who is in the insane asylum.

As stated in this paper early in Oct., he found some buried money in the cellar (so he called) of the Albrecht house, in which he was residing. He saw R. C. Boyd of the Carson bank, who is in charge of Albrecht's affair, and to him Cohoe stated that his conscience was troubling him; he couldn't sleep nights and was generally broken up, so thought best to tell him he had found $800 in the cellar of his house. Later he stated he had found $845. Shortly after this Young, the shoe man, brought a 20 dollar bill to the bank to see if it was good. He was told it was all o.k. but had been buried, and on being asked as to who had given it to him, stated that it was Cohoe.

This brought matters to a head and a triangular meeting was held in Judge McCarty's office between the Judge, Mr. Boyd and Cohoe. Cohoe claimed that he had consulted attorneys who cautioned him to hold on to the money until a suitable award would be fixed for his turning it over.

He also stated that the amount was $850. The judge told him that it was useless for him to be hired or bribed to give up the money and quietly sent the sheriff for Mrs. Cohoe.

On her arrival and being questioned she stated that the amount found was $1800. Cohoe stated that this was right and on being accompanied by the sheriff turned over to him that amount in an oyster can, which gave evidence of having been buried. This seemed to settle the matter and for a week or so all was quiet as Cohoe had promised to turn over any future finds. But again came that troublesome conscience and with it came Mr. Cohoe again to the bank.

It was simply heartrending this time. He had found more money, he said in a bottle; gold, he had felt the need of a drink, he had also taken it, he also took others; then he went into a rather dazed condition, or trance. Shortly after he found himself at the depot; again a hiatus of memory; then he discovered himself in a poker game at Nebraska City with a policeman looking at him; the policeman was holding a dog; Cohoe wanted it; policeman sold it and Cohoe gave him a $20 gold piece. Again a lapse of memory; Cohoe on his return to things mundane found himself looking at the Douglas county court house in Omaha. He at once returned to Auburn and had come forthwith to Mr. Boyd with the $145 in gold which remained from his trance.

From all the sights, moans and self reproaches of the man, Mr. Boyd drew his own conclusions; and an investigation being quietly set on foot developed the fact that Cohoe did really visit the places indicated in his story.

Further investigation developed the finding of some of Albrecht's papers buried in a wood shed, in which he keeps a memo of three separate amounts hidden money, viz $1,800 which Cohoe found and turned over; $1,000 in gold which he admits to have found later and of which he claims to have spent all but the $145 turned over to Mr. Boyd; and $1,000 in currency which he claims to have no knowledge of whatever.

Persons with whom he came in contact during his series of traces state that he was in possession of a large roll of bills. His arrest is for the purpose of determining how much money he has actually found, to punish him for its appropriation for his own use and to rescue what remains of his later discoveries. He was placed under $2,000 which he failed to give.

All the circumstances being taken in consideration and his peculiar actions, his conflicting statements and his being influenced by what he terms 'conscience' would tend to indicate that all is not exactly right with Mr. Cohoe's mental faculties.—Auburn Herald.

The President's message contains 20,000 words and requires four pages of the ordinary news paper to print. It covers all questions of national import, dealing especially with railroad rates. The message is too long. Not one man in a thousand will wade through it. While it is an able state document, it should have been condensed at least one half.

A Correction.

The Tribune desires to correct the statement made in last week's issue that a dance was given at St. Thomas rectory.

Poultry Wanted.

I will pay 73c per pound for hens and springs. Prices good until December 9.
