Curing Drunkenness Without the Patient's Knowledge Has Been Proven a Success.

Can inebriety be cured by suggestion? asks Public Opinion. This is a question which has been asked many times and satisfactorily answered in the affirmative. But the question of practicing suggestion while the patient sleeps is a different proposition, and, therefore, a recent article in the Journal des Debats of Paris is of interest. The experiments in question were conducted by the well-known psychologist, Dr. Paul Farez. "The man under observation refused all offers of treatment, but notwithstanding his refusal, against his will and unknown to him, the man was cured and has remained so for four years. The patient was 25 years of age, married, of sound constitution and average health. He commenced drinking when he was 17 years of age, and his wife had married him in order to reform him. After his marriage, however, he drank as before. His daily ration was two quarts of wine with his meals, and during the day several glasses of brandy, rum, vermouth, absinthe, etc. Ordinarily the man was quiet, but when he had taken more absinthe than usual he became violent, abused his wife, broke everything within reach, and surrendered completely to his frenzy. The day following this delirium the man remembered nothing, but when told of what he had done he wept, promised to become sober, etc. The scenes, however, were soon repeated.

"Dr. Farez decided to try, with the approval of the family of the patient, suggestion during natural sleep. The treatment took place four or five times per week, and, although the patient did not know what was going on, there was slow and steady improvement. The treatment commenced in January. Up to April the man had been intoxicated only three times. In April and May there were no acts of violence; in June and July slight intoxications on two occasions; in August and September a trip to the country, but no wine during this time, only beer. Returning to Paris, the man did not go to a cafe, but drank a little absinthe and less than a quart of absinthe for all of his meals. After a year the only thing taken was a little absinthe on Sunday and Saturday, and from this time the patient has not touched wine and has only taken a little absinthe once or twice a month and at home. He is no longer irritable, but happy and a regular worker. The treatment had to be continued for 18 months, but the result is complete and the patient entirely transformed. He has gained control of his will and is gentle and affectionate."

ST. PETERSBURG IS CAY.

With or Without War Enjoyment Goes on in the Russian Capital's Society.

War or no war, the aristocratic Russian pursues his pleasures with an abandonment that speaks of unlimited resources or unlimited recklessness. The pleasures of the table are protracted to an inordinate degree. A lunch, in which the courses are plentifully watered with champagne, will spread itself through the afternoon. You may barely escape at five o'clock, though you began to eat at one. The host never sits down, plying his guest with a succession of good things, liquid and solid. Even the afternoon tea in middle-class circles is a very formidable undertaking. It includes dishes of various sorts, in which meat will certainly figure, and Russian tea, served in a glass with lemon, is but the pale comparison to sparkling champagne. The appearance of the streets tells of wealth, too. No finer equipages exist anywhere than those which, horsed with coal-black steeds, dash at full speed, in lofty disregard for the mere foot passenger, down the central strip of wood pavement in the principal "prospects," as the wider streets are designated. Holding the reins in his two hands, with arms out stretched, the driver, medieval in dress, has the summary methods of a Roman charioteer. Indeed, there is something of imperial Rome in the second capital of the czar.

Grip Quickly Knocked Out.

S. Egleston of Maple Landing, Iowa. "Knees and joints aching, muscles sore, head stopped up, eyes and nose running, with alternate spells of chills and fever.
