

Poultry Wanted for Cash

Will pay you 1/2 cent per pound more in trade for your poultry than cash with privilege of trading anywhere in Falls City that you may choose. I also handle all kinds of Coal, wood, Salt, Baled Hay, Straw and Grain Bran Shorts, Chop feed oyster shell for chicken oil cake stock and poultry food. Cash paid for butter, eggs, poultry and Hides.

CHECK'S FEED STORE

The Falls City Roller Mills

Does a general milling business, and manufactures the following brands of flour

NFLOUR MAGNOLIA CROWN

The above brands are guaranteed to be of the highest possible quality. We also manufacture all mill products and conduct a general

Grain, Live Stock and Coal Business and solicit a share of your patronage

P. S. Heacock & Son, Falls City, Neb.

Headquarters for Christmas Goods

Something for each and everyone
 Papa, Mamma, daughter, son,
 Grandpa, Grandma, Auntie and Uncle too
 Cousins and Second Cousins, nieces and Nephews
 You must bring them all in
 To see what we have got
 We will be glad to
 Show you a whole lot
 Remember them with a present
 On that glad morn,
 The day of all glad days
 That Christ was born.

MOORE'S PHARMACY

J. D. SPRAGINS Falls City, Neb. S. E. FRIEND Hiawatha, Kan.

SPRAGINS & FRIEND
Real Estate and Exchange Brokers

Lands, City Property and Merchandise. Loans, Collections, Fire, Lightning, Tornado, Windstorm, Accident and Life Insurance. Over Hargrave's Store.
 P. O. Box 944 FALLS CITY, NEB.

- FARMERS -

Why Not Buy Your Wife one of These

CREAM SEPERATORS

at Werner, Mosiman & Co

Just the thing they need, it will please them and will make them money. Remember we have the only cream separator on the market that runs easy, any child can operate it and for quick and close skimming it cannot be beat. Our prices on them are right. We have bought a lot of them for spot cash and we will sell them at a close price. Call and see them. Remember we carry a big line of—Buggies, Surries, Wagons, in stock all the time and can save you money on Windmills, Pumps, Tanks, Gasoline Engines and everything in the Implement line.

Call and see us. Yours for Business,

WERNER, MOSIMAN & Co.

New Candy Store

Offers Home Made Candy fresh each day. The best, purest and freshest for Wholesale and Retail trade. One door north of Hargraue & Hargrave

The Falls City Candy Kitchen

ANNOUNCEMENT

Having secured the exclusive agency in Falls City for Sycamore Springs Mineral Water, we are prepared to furnish customers with the same. Price 60 cents per five gallon cask. Call phone 189 or phone 39.

FRANK GIST
C. F. REAVIS Jr.

Read The Tribune

White House Brides.

The announcement that Miss Alice Roosevelt is to be married to Congressman Nicolas Longworth in the East room of the White House in Feb. next recalls the fact that only one other marriage has been celebrated in that apartment. That other marriage was the wedding of Miss Nellie Grant, the only daughter of President Grant and Algernon Charles Frederick Sartoris, of England, in May, 1874.

But there have been altogether nine White House brides and Miss Roosevelt will be the tenth.

The Sartoris-Grant wedding was a notable social event of its day but it is expected that Miss Roosevelt's will be even more notable from a spectacular point of view. The White House, in its modernized arrangement, is pre-eminently adapted to a social spectacle of this kind, and the wide halls and connecting drawing rooms on the south side are admirably suited to a wedding.

The East room, where it is expected that the ceremony will be performed is a stately apartment, eighty feet long, forty-two feet high. There are in it four mantels of marble with Italian black and gold fronts each mantel being surmounted with a French mirror framed in a style suited to the room.

Four other large mirrors, two at end of the room, reflect the rays from three large chandeliers, each one of which has twenty-seven burners. Glittering cut glass pendants add to the effect of these chandeliers. The walls are tinted in harmonizing colors.

The East room was not used until the Monroe administration when furniture for it was purchased in Paris. For long it was not seen by the public except on the most formal state occasions.

Mrs. Madison did not use it at all, while Mrs. John Adams used it as a drying room in stormy weather. Its great size has militated against its use for family gatherings or purely social affairs, and hence though there have been many weddings in the White House Miss Nellie Grant's was the only one celebrated in the state apartment.

Even when President Cleveland married, he chose the Blue room in preference to the East room as the scene of the ceremony, its size and beauty lending itself to floral decorations more readily than the East room.

The first marriage to occur in the White House was that of Miss Todd, of Philadelphia, a cousin of Mrs. Madison, in the winter of 1811. The bridegroom was a young member of congress, John G. Jackson, of Virginia, who became later the great-uncle of Stonewall Jackson.

Mrs. Madison, who was the great social leader of her day and whose dearly loved weddings made a gala occasion of the marriage of her young relatives and the festivities were of a most hospitable character. President Madison put aside some of his quiet reserve for the time being and entered into the merriment of the evening with as much spirit as was shown by the large family connection present. This wedding took place in the Red room—then, as now, a favorite family gathering place.

The second marriage was that of President Monroe's second daughter, Marie, who was married in the Blue room in March, 1820, the bridegroom being her cousin, Samuel L. Gouverneur, of New York. The wedding was described as being "in the New York style," that is, with only relatives and a few of the most intimate friends of the family present. Two wedding receptions to which all the world was invited followed.

Six year later another wedding occurred in the White House, and this time it was the son of a president who was the bridegroom. Young John Adams married Miss Helen Jackson. This wedding was a semi-private one, as was that of Miss Lewis, of Tennessee, the daughter of President Jackson's friend, who became the bride of M. Pageot, secretary of the French legation and afterward minister.

A second marriage in President Jackson's time, and the fifth to occur in the White House was that of Miss Easton, the president's niece, to Mr. Polk of Tennessee.

During the following administration there was no wedding in the White House, though President Van Buren's second son, Major Van Buren, was married to Miss Angelica Singleton of South Carolina in November, 1838, and on the following New Year's day President Van Buren gave a reception which was of unusual attraction in consequence of the fact that at it the bride made her first public appearance.

The next wedding that took place in the executive mansion was that of Miss Tyler, the third of President Tyler's daughters, to William Waller of Virginia. This wedding occurred in the blue room and was celebrated on the evening of the last day of January, 1842.

It was the most brilliant that had yet occurred in the White House. President Tyler was a Virginian with the old style ideas of hospitality, and he had not only a large family but an extended family connection, and the Virginians of that day vied with one another in making the social life of Washington pleasant. There had been four Virginia presidents. Tyler making the fifth and the wedding was not only a family, but a state affair. Mrs. Madison and Mr. Webster, who was then secretary of state, graced this wedding with their presence.

President Tyler, whose wife died in 1842, remarried two years later, and in June, 1844, his bridal reception was held in the White House. The marriage had occurred in New York.

It was the custom in that day for refreshments to be served at all the presidential receptions and one of the features of the wedding reception table was a very large and elegantly decorated bride's cake. Champagne and other wines were served to the throng.

Later on the Marine band played in the south grounds and the president and his bride appeared on the portico near which crowds of people soon gathered. Mrs. Tyler, who was Miss Julia Gardner, of New York described her reception in part, as follows:

"The company, who waited upon me with their most respectful compliments, comprised the talent and the highest of station in the land. For two hours I remained on my feet receiving quite in queenlike style, I assure you.

"At 6 o'clock I had to appear on the balcony. It being music afternoon, and go through introductions. Throughout, everything has been very brilliant—brilliant to my heart's content, as much so as if I was actually to be the presidentess for four more years to come.

Crowds followed me whither I went. My high estate has been thus far altogether pleasant to me."

There were no wedding bells rang in the White House during the administrations of Polk, Taylor, Fillmore, Pierce, Buchanan, Lincoln and Johnson, and it was not until May 1874, when Miss Nellie Grant's wedding occurred, that the White House was again the scene of a marriage. As the bridegroom on this occasion was an Englishman, the British minister played a prominent part in the ceremony.

At the wedding breakfast, served in the state dining room, the president stood at the head of the table the bride on his left and next to her stood Sir Edward Thornton, the British minister. The bridegroom and Mrs. Grant stood on the right. Vice President Wilson stood beside Mrs. Grant.

The bridal couple made their departure from the White House in a carriage drawn by four horses. A special and new palatial car, which had been made for the Vienna exposition, was supplied for their accommodation. It was elaborately decorated with evergreens and American and English flags.

President and Mrs. Hayes held the only wedding of its kind ever celebrated in the White House. On December 31, 1877, they had their silver wedding there. The same minister who married them in 1852 and many of the guests who witnessed the ceremony were present.

On the first evening of this celebration there was a family gathering, and the next evening a large party was present, the majority of the guests being Ohioans. A feature of the second evening's entertainment was the wedding supper. The floral decorations were superb, and the presents sent the president and his wife from all parts of the country were exhibited.

During the Hayes administration a Blue room wedding occurred, the president's niece, Miss Emily Platt, being the bride. The wedding occurred in June 1878. The bridegroom was General Russell Hastings.

President Cleveland's marriage to Miss Frances Folsom took place in the Blue room in the White House on the evening of June 2, 1880. The room had been transformed into a floral bower, and the entire first floor of the executive mansion was garlanded with roses and shields of plants and blossoms.

The wedding party was a small one, the guests being restricted to the relatives of the bride and bridegroom, the cabinet officers and their wives and Private Secretary and Mrs. Lomont. The company met in the Blue room at 7 o'clock, and ten minutes before the time appointed for the service the Marine band, stationed in the corridor, announced the coming of the bridal party by playing Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." Down the western stairway and across the western corridor came the president and his bride unattended.

They entered the Blue room and the simple ceremony was at once begun. A chronicler of the day gave this picture of the bride as she appeared to the guests on the evening of her wedding:

"The bride beautiful in face and form was a vision of loveliness as she stood blushing before audience of friends gathered about her. Her gown was of ivory satin, with trimmings of India silk, arranged in Grecian folds over the front of the high corsage and fastened in the folds of satin at the side.

"Orange blossoms and buds and leaves outlined this drapery and adorned the edge of the skirt. A coronet of orange blossoms fastened the veil and garnitures of the same blossoms were artistically arranged throughout the costume.

"Her veil of silk tulle enveloped her form and softened the effect of the satin gown. It fell over the entire length of the long court train, which lay about the feet of the bride in a glistening coil."

"She carried no flowers and wore no jewels, except her engagement ring. Gloves reaching to the elbow completed the perfect toilet of the White House bride."

From the bride of 1886 to the bride to be of 1906 is a lapse of twenty years, and in that time no wedding has occurred in the White House. Frank, unassuming, happy and kind-hearted, Miss Alice Roosevelt has won friends for herself wherever she has been, and the people of her own country will wish her good luck when she becomes the bride of Congressman Longworth.

Proud Father of Triplets.

John Schneider of River Forest Ill., is a happy man. Mr. Schneider is also a happy man. Mr. Schneider is a father. He is very much a father, for triplets were born in the Schneider household. Mr. Schneider thus multiplied his seven-fold happiness by three and became very, very happy and counted ten young Schneiders.

So did the neighbors. The stork had visited the Schneider home frequently. It had hovered and alighted about that River Forest home seven times before it entered the wholesale business. The neighbors watched to see whether any man could survive the tenth period of happiness. Mr. Schneider did. The neighbors made merry.

Then a brilliant thought came to Dr. A. S. Greenwood. He didn't say a word to the neighbors. He had some doubt about the success of his undertaking. It was of such importance that he didn't dare raise the hopes of the people and then fail. He didn't know just where the other party to the scheme stood. He hadn't heard from him officially for some time. He knew the second party had congress on his hands. He was aware he was engaged in digging a canal.

He thought he would take a chance. So he wrote as follows:

President Roosevelt—Sir: Your historical expression of a "square deal" cannot be lived up to at all times, but the wife of John Schneider of this village made a triangular deal of three kings yesterday. This influx of population raises the number of children to ten, the oldest being twelve years old. The parents and community would like some expression from you, knowing your interest in home production

A. S. GREENWOOD, M. D.

The days that followed seemed long. The physician watched every mail. Sometimes he was near despair. As day after day passed and no answer came the physician became certain the president had changed his policy. But there came a day when gladness sprang to his eyes and a smile to his lips.

That was the day the neighbors were surprised to see him almost running down the street and holding a letter in his hand.

"It came" he said.

"What came?" they queried.

Then he read:

Dr. A. S. Greenwood—Dear Sir: Your favor of the 12th inst. has been received and the president thanks you for writing. Please be good enough to convey to Mr. and Mrs. Schneider the president's hearty congratulations and his good wishes for their entire family. WM. LOEB, JR., Secretary to the President.

The letter accounts for the proud air assumed by Mr. Schneider. And every man can't decorate his parlor with such a letter.

—Chicago Chronicle.

Money To Loan.

$40,000 special fund, party desires to get out or contracted for by January 1st, if possible. Will loan three to ten years in sums to suit, on satisfactory real estate. Borrower can pay $100 or any multiple thereof on any interest pay day. If you wish to borrow to invest, pay off an old loan, or get money be sure to call on or write to

HENRY C. SMITH,
 Falls City, Nebr.

A Timely Tonic.

At this season of coughs and colds it is well to know that Foley's Honey and Tar is the greatest throat and lung remedy. It cures quickly and prevents serious results from a cold.