A TWO YEAR OLD.

With this issue The Tribune completes its second year of life. The road it has traveled has not always been pleasant nor free from care and anxiety, but the only thing of consequence is that notwithstanding the roughness of the journey, it has arrived.

The Tribune is the biggest two year old in the state of Nebraska. It is also the most widely read paper in Richardson county. By reason of the absorption of the school paper, the Rulo paper and the Humboldt Enterprise it has obtained a circulation that reaches every rural route in the county and is read by more Richardson county people than any other local paper. The most encouraging fact to the management however, is the fact that its subscription list is constantly increasing.

The Tribune has ceased to be a liability and has become an asset. It is now on a satisfactory paying basis and we believe is destined to become more remunerative in the future. Many thought our subscription price of $1.00 a year was in advance of the times, and frequent were the predictions of failure. The experimental stage is passed; the future is assured and crying critics have ceased their doleful predictions.

The Tribune's policy in the future may be gleaned from its conduct in the past. It will be as formerly a republican newspaper. It will be absolutely independent of private interest and will serve the general community in accordance with its judgment of right. It will not be a time-server nor permit its columns to be used by any man or combination of men to their own interest and at the expense of the general good. It will be unafraid in all things. It will never, never be the purveyor of scandal.

The Tribune will try to give value receive for every dollar it receives whether paid for subscription, advertising or job work.

It will always keep clean in its every department.

It will ever be a NEWSPAPER.

QUO VADIS.

The other evening the operator of a phonograph was playing for his friends some of the old songs, such as "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "When you and I were Young, Maggie" etc. Then he remarked, "lets have something modern," and then played "Won't you come Home Bill Bailey," "I've got a Feelin' for you," and "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree." The contrast is indeed shocking. Some fellow who knew once said "sing me the songs of a nation and I will tell you of its people." What would one's judgment be if based on those songs which are now popular with the American people? The trouble with America is not that it isn't going forward rapidly enough, the trouble is that it ought to back up. Return to the simple life, the life of labor and hardship if need be. Value the real more and the frivolous less. Where one of Shakespear's classics appears on the stage once a thousand musical comedies are heard. This is true because of the demand. The stage doesn't create sentiment, it responds to a sentiment already created. American sentiment is of the vaudeville brand. It is disclosed by the books we read and that are being published and sold by the thousand every year, by the songs that are written and sung, by the plays at the theaters and by the plays that are not at the theaters, by the garish, gaudy decorations of our great hotels and the popping of corks in their cafes, by the advance of club life and the decadence of home life, by the blind struggle after riches absorbing the waking hours of the modern man and leaving no time for culture or contemplation, by the following after that which is frivolous and the indifference to that which is sincere and worthy. We may be old fashioned, but not so old fashioned that we care to dwell on the good old days. We may be old fashioned, but not old fashioned to the extent that we regret that "Silver Threads Among the Gold" has been displaced by "I've got a Feelin' for you," that "old curiosity shop" is covered with dust on neglected book shelves while two hundred thousand copies of "The Crisis" were sold in 18 months, that Mme. Highkick draws crowded houses at the Orpheum and such names as Edwin Booth are but memories.

It's time to back up, to return to the real, the enduring. In the days of a nations prosperity, like an individual, it is prone to go the wrong way. One day the Lord met Peter without the gates of Jerusalem and asked of him the question, "Quo Vadis?" Meaning, where goest thou? Have you written it 1905 yet? The Salem Commercial club is the right sort, the sort that wants a thing done and then does it. Is it worth while to hate? It makes you insufferable to your friends, embitters your life and dries up the purest fountain of your being, the divine attribute of love. A united effort will make the year 1906 the most prosperous year in Falls City's history. Encourage a friendly feeling between the town and the farming community contiguous thereto. Make the farmer feel that it is his town, that he is a moving force in its welfare, and that his efforts towards its upbuilding are appreciated.

If the drainage proposition succeeds as we believe it will and the thousands of acres of overflowed lands in this county made productive as we believe they will be, someone should erect a life sized statue of R. E. Grinstead in the valley of the Nemaha at the west line of the county to commemorate the accomplishment and the stupendous work he has done towards the accomplishment.

Horses and Mules

Remember the horse and mule sale at the Metz barn in this city Saturday, January 13. Here is a chance to get in shape for spring work with a cheap team. Mrs. Geo Stiles and son Eddy of Dawson visited with friends here the first of the week.

Legal Notice.

In the District Court for Richardson county, Nebraska, William Kinsey by Henry Stitzer, his Guardian, Plaintiff vs.
Levi L. Kinsey and Leola Beller, Defendants.
The above named Leola Beller, defendant will take notice that on the 4th day of January, 1906, there was filed by said plaintiff in the district court for Richardson county, Nebraska, a petition, the object and prayer of which are to foreclose a certain contract of sale executed by William Kinsey and Catherine Kinsey to Levi Kinsey whereby the said William Kinsey and Catherine Kinsey agreed to sell to said Levi Kinsey the following described real estate situated in Richardson county, Nebraska, to-wit:
Beginning at the north east corner of section No. nine (9) in township one (1), range 11 (11) in Richardson county, Nebraska, thence west to quarter section corner on the north side of said section nine, thence south with center line of said section to the center of said section, thence east with center line running east and west to a stone in center of county road, thence with county road in northwest direction to poles on a stone, thence east three rods to center channel of south fork of Great Nemaha river, thence down the center of said river to a point on line between sections 9 and 10, thence north with said line to place of beginning containing 131 acres more or less and all in section 9, in town one, range 15 in Richardson county, Nebraska.
The said Leola Beller, non-resident defendant, claims to have a mortgage on said land and the prayer of the petition is that she may appear and make known the character of her lien and the amount due thereon, and that said land be sold under foreclosure subject to whatever rights the said Leola Beller may have in the premises by reason of said mortgage.
You are hereby notified to plead to said petition on or before the 19th day of February, 1906.

Our Saving Plan

This bank inaugurated a Childrens Department and will open a bank account with any boy or girl, in his or her own name. You can open an account with a Dollar upwards. These deposits will draw interest at the rate of 4 per cent and are limited to children under the age of eighteen. The older folks will find our interest bearing Time Certificates of Deposit. Just the thing for them. These accounts mean a good deal of extra work for us but if by this means we succeed in encouraging the child in self denial and the proper use of money, we shall feel well repaid for the extra work. Parents should encourage their children in the act of saving along the lines suggested by this bank.
