

How to Preserve Seed Corn. Notwithstanding all that has been said in the agricultural papers, by institute lecturers, and by the speakers on the corn special, a good many farmers will lose quite a large per cent of their possible crop next year because they did not grasp the fundamental point in the preservation of seed corn.

First the corn should be dried out as thoroughly as possible in the open air. This may be done, and has been done in many cases, by simply hanging it over a clothes-line, wire, or pole in the open air, or by tying a dozen ears together, each one by itself, and hang the string against the side of the barn, and then finishing the drying by moving it before severe frost into a room in which there can be more or less artificial heat, with the doors and windows open, so that the moisture will be carried out of the room.

When corn is about the condition that No. 2 corn is in May it will then stand a large amount of severe weather. Even zero weather will not hurt corn that is sufficiently dry. As we have said so often, it is not moisture that hurts seed corn, nor the cold, but moisture and cold together.

The seed corn may be hung up in the kitchen, if there is no other place although we do not approve of this, especially if it interferes with the good wife's cooking operations. The kitchen is not the place for it. There is too much moisture on wash days, and also on other days from the cooking. A room above the kitchen with a stovepipe running through it is a much better place. When corn is sufficiently dry it may be kept in a dry cellar. It should not be kept over a stable in which cattle are kept, for the reason that it is apt to absorb moisture. It might be put in the ground for that matter, as the Indians have done from time immemorial, after it is once thoroughly dry. It may be put in the oats bin and covered up with dry oats. The main thing is, first to get it dried out, and then to keep it dry. The drying is the most important thing, and not the temperature to which it is subjected afterwards.—The Wallace Farmer.

Children Poisoned. Many children are poisoned and made nervous and weak, if not killed outright, by mothers giving them cough syrups containing opiates. Foley's Honey and Tar is a safe and certain remedy for coughs, croup and lung troubles, and is the only prominent cough medicine that contains no opiates or other poisons. Advertising Pays. A young lady working in a stocking factory, fearing that her chances for matrimony were small, says the White Cloud Globe wrote the following and slipped it into the toe of a gentleman's sock: "A young lady, good looking and of some means, would like to correspond with the wearer of this sock, if he is single with a view to matrimony." A young man bought the sock and said: "There's my chance." He wrote to the young lady, offering himself as a suitable party, and to his surprise got this reply, I have been married eight years and have a family of five children. The man from whom he bought the sock had never advertised, consequently they had lain on the shelves for eight years.

Contracted Chronic Diarrhoea While in the Philippines. "While with the U. S. Army in the Philippines, I contracted chronic diarrhoea. I suffered severely from this terrible disease for over three years and tried the prescriptions of numerous physicians, but found nothing that did me any good until I tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, two small bottles of which entirely cured me and I have since had no return of the disease.—HERMAN STEIN, 312 N. Runaway Accident. About six o'clock Christmas evening while Mrs. Myrtle Rice and small son, living on the Holman farm northeast of the city was coming to the city in a buggy drawn by a single horse, and when near the fair grounds the animal took fright and Mrs. Rice being unable to hold him, started at a break-neck speed up the road. To save the little boy from injury, Mrs. Rice held him out beyond the wheels and let him fall to the ground. She then succeeded in turning the horse to the side and when near the southwest corner of the fair grounds the horse fell in such a way that its neck was broken in two places. Horse and buggy were piled in a promiscuous heap. Mrs. Rice was pitched forward by the sudden stop but luckily escaped serious injury. The little boy was only slightly cut and bruised. Altogether it was a narrow escape for both Mrs. Rice and son.—Auburn Herald.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism. "My mother has been a sufferer for many years from rheumatism," says W. H. Howard of Husband, Pennsylvania. "At times she was unable to move at all while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried. In fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale at Kerr's Drug Store.

Tommy's Excuse. Tommy Mulligan, of the 7th grade, was absent from the classroom for one entire day. It would appear that he had played truant, for unbeknown to Tommy his teacher had spied him trudging homeward with pockets bulging suspiciously, when she, too, was homeward bound that afternoon. But Tommy brought a note of excuse the next morning, which of course, would prove that he had been detained at home legitimately. The writing was hardly that of a feminine hand, and the note appeared to have been written laboriously and with much blotting; furthermore, the penmanship seemed to be strangely familiar to his teacher. The note read as follows: "Dear teacher—Pleas excuse Tomy for not coming to school yestiddy, he cudnot come. I tore my pants.—Mrs. Mulligan."

CHRISTMAS GREETING. The following is a copy of the Christmas Greeting we received from Rev. Elmer Ward Coe, Pastor First Christian church, Hutchinson, Kansas.

Around the Divine Cradle we gather at this Christmastide and listen to catch the message which, from this source, has echoed down the ages. As we behold again the Bethlehem star may its bright rays penetrate the innermost recesses of our hearts and lives bringing brightness to dispel all gloom and to chase away all clouds and shadows, all sorrows and cares.

As we listen to the shepherd song, catching its music may we become attuned to its harmonies and join in the glad refrain of praise to God in the highest, and as the echo resounds throughout the earth may peace and good will descend upon us—that peace which causeth the heart to overflow with His beneficent kindness, which makes us intent upon blessing as He would bless, and which so centers our hearts upon God that all life disciplines become only alter-stairs in the ascent of the soul;—that good will which creates an active endeavor to reach all whom we may cheer and bless, whether they be struggling up the rugged mountain-side of affliction or whether they stand on the peak in full view of the sunshine of life;—that good will which makes our lives so near in accord with the perfect life of Christ, that they may know and radiate His power and purpose.

And again as we look into the face of the Bethlehem babe may we catch that inspiration for purity of life and nobility of living; may we reflect the light of beauty and love which shines from His face, and may our hearts be attuned to His that they will throb with loving sympathy for all humanity, causing the cords of love to vibrate at His touch.

Then as we grow more into His likeness may we go forth as He went forth, "not to be ministered unto but to minister." When the fires burn brightly, when friends are near and hearts are full of gratitude, may these lessons from the Christ child and the spirit of His life be ours. Then will our homes be more sacred, more beautiful, more dear than ever before; our lives more filled with an intense longing for the good, the true, the beautiful. That this may prove true is the sincere desire of your minister and friend.

This Christmas day, 1905. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy The Best Made. "In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker, of Porterville, California. There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventive of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale at Kerr's Drug Store.
