To be a helpmate to her husband, To keep clear of trashy literature,

To be light-hearted and fleet-footed.—Philadelphia Record.

It is a great thing to get people to thinking right. Do not be discouraged because you cannot make them do right. Omnipotence has been working at that job for about a century of centuries and has made some progress, but it will be some time before the result will be accomplished.—York Times.

Thursday was an ideal day for the wolf hunt and a big crowd was in attendance people come from near Shubert and all the surrounding towns, several wolves were started but only one of those wily marauders was killed at the final round up, the hide was sold at auction bringing $1.10. Another hunt is already under consideration.—Salem Index.

Early Tuesday morning the community of Reserve was startled to hear of the death of H. Rummel, one of the pioneer of Brown county. He had been sick during the night and died very suddenly about 8:30 a. m. He had worked as usual in R. W. Cornelison's lumber yard, nearly all of the previous day. His health, however, had not been good for some time, as he had two strokes of paralysis before. The funeral services were held at the Christian church Thursday at 2:30 conducted by Rev. Holland. The services were in charge of the Masons. Mr. Rummel leaves a large family of children.—Hiawatha World. H. Rummel was the father of Mrs. Spencer of this city.

State Fair News.

At their winter meeting the Nebraska State Board of Agriculture had an entirely new proposition confronting them in relation to election of the prominent officers. It has been customary for the Board to retain in office the Secretary and Treasurer, both of whom had died in the past year, so that an entire new list of leading officials have been selected. The ballot cast resulted in the election of Peter Youngers, Jr., of Geneva, President; E. Z. Russell, of Blair, Treasurer; and W. R. Mellor, of Loup City, Secretary. At the recommendation of Mr. Mellor, the retiring President, the Board passed a resolution permanently locating the Secretary's office at Lincoln, and the same can be found to the left of the north entrance on the main floor of the Capitol building.

Eight Million Dollar Irrigation Project.

Gold was discovered in the Boise River Valley, Idaho, in 1862, and during the succeeding twenty-five years over $200,000,000 were taken out. A large but evanescent population flocked to the Valley although the nearest railroad was 200 miles away and everything had to be freighted in and out. But only one crop of gold could be garnered and the expectation was that when the pay dirt had all been panned, the Valley of the Boise, like many other mining districts, would vanish from the map as a producing locality. Not so however. The output of the Valley today from its hundred or so thousand acres of splendidly irrigated land is fast approaching the profits realized from the mines during their best day. Certainly when the enormous irrigation works which are there being constructed by the Government are completed the output of agriculture will contribute to the world's wealth every year and for all time thereafter, an amount much greater than the annual products of the "Basin" diggings during their palmiest days, while the Valley will support a population of at least 200,000.

The state of Idaho is larger than all New England, but it has less than two persons to the square mile. What it needs is water; the storage of the melting snows from its vast mountain ranges which run riot to the Gulf of California every spring. Its climate is delightful and invigorating, with a latitude of the south of France and northern Italy. The Boise Valley in the southern part of the State lies at an elevation of about 2,500 feet and the lowest temperature during the year is but slightly under freezing.

In Boise Valley as in California in the early days, the demand for food, and the exorbitant prices for vegetables and meat, induced some of the hardy Argonauts to break the rules of caste and engage in what was then considered the humblest of occupations, the growing of potatoes, cabbage and small fruits. With splendid markets this industry prospered and grew, and when the pioneers were exhausted a thriving farming community remained to develop these permanent resources of the valley.

But little of the "Klondyke" of 1864 remains. Its disappointments and lavish rewards, its destitution and reckless prodigality are things of the past. Today it is difficult to realize that this valley was one of the famous theatres where reckless and daring spirits were the principal actors and where only the fittest survived. Unlike many of the Klondykes which have had their day during the past 60 years this valley provided for the overflow, and the spirit of enterprise which prompted thousands to brave all dangers in the search of gold, found a field here for the exercise of surplus energy in the construction of canals and the reclamation of the lands in adjacent valleys.

Like the Mormon farmers, the early tillers of the Boise valley found irrigation necessary, and since the first crude efforts nearly $2,000,000 have been expended in the construction of irrigation works, and more than 100,000 acres of land have been reclaimed. Substantial cities and towns have grown up, railroads cross the valley in every direction, and from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 have been added to the productive capital of the west. But the limit for private enterprise has been reached. The natural flow of the river has been fully utilized, and it is only by the construction of engineering works enormously expensive that the complete agricultural development of the country can take place. The only agency which can safely undertake his great work is the United States. With commendable enterprise the owners of land in the valley have harmonized all questions of conflicting water rights and are now preparing to cooperate heartily with the government in carrying forward what is termed the Payette-Boise project, the largest of the national reclamation works which has yet been approved by the secretary of the interior.

LARGER THAN SALT LAKE VALLEY

The construction of this great system will require several years and entails the expenditure of nearly $8,000,000. The area to be reclaimed is 370,000 acres, or more than twice the cultivated acreage of Rhode Island. The works consist of storage reservoirs on the headwaters of the Payette and Boise rivers, and in the Boise valley the building of gigantic dams on these two rivers and about 200 miles of main canals. The secretary has authorized the initial construction of a dam in Boise river, about 33 miles of main canal, and a reservoir which will be capable of storing water enough for the late irrigation of about 120,000 acres of land in Boise valley.

The bids were opened at Boise, Idaho, on February 1, 1906, and the contracts provide for the expenditure by the United States of about $1,000,000. The Boise valley now has a population of about 30,000. It contains 50 per cent more irrigable land and has a more favorable climate than the great Salt Lake valley of Utah, which today sustains a population of about 150,000.

BISON FIERCEST OF CATTLE

All of a Hunter's Skill and Nerve Is Needed When Tackling Such Big Game.

Called bison (incorrectly) in India, seladang in Malaya, siang in Burma, and gnudang in Siam, the gaur (Bos gaurus) is the largest and fiercest of all wild cattle, with hoofs small in proportion to its height, and of deerlike, rather than oxlike, character, says Outing. Its sense of smell is as acute as that of the elephant and its vision much keener. When you seek one of these cattle you need all your hunter's skill and your nerve, for, next to the elephant and bracketed with the Cape buffalo of Africa, I believe its natural temperament and the character of the country in which it is found make the seladang in the Malay peninsula the most formidable quarry on earth. In India, where the range of the gaur is the hilly, wooded districts, they are more apt to be found in herds of some size, and, because of the more dangerous sections, less difficult of approach, and less dangerous to the hunter than in the Malay peninsula, where the jungle is the densest that grows, and almost invariably the quarry has the man at a disadvantage. In Malaya it is snare shooting, where the game, on being wounded, turns hunter, and, concealed, awaits the sportsman, who must approach with infinite caution, with senses always alert and hand ever ready if he would stop or turn aside the vicious charge. You may never in this jungle survey the field of operations from some vantage point; but in the close growing angle of vines, and canes, and thorn bushes, and heavy coarse weed of grass-like mass—through which you can never get even dim sight for over 20 yards and most of the time can scarcely see that many feet ahead—you must follow the tracks of the seladang you have wounded, never knowing at what instant the maddened beast may burst from the jungle practically right on top of you. One seladang I was fortunate enough to finally get was only just at the other side of a bamboo clump when he started his charge full at me. This is the dangerous and the unavoidable feature of hunting the beast in Malaya. Luckily for the hunter, the seladang, if unsuccessful in its charge, passes on to await him at another point. Never have I heard of one turning instantly to a second charge after missing the hunter on the first rush. But, on the other hand, if the seladang charges home it remains to gorge its victim.
