THROUGH THE YEARS.

These are winter days and the streets are deserted and the haunts of men are silent and alone; yet the summer cometh and Spring's warmth and gladness waits without the door for God will remember again the world.

These are winter days and the ghostly branches wave and creak in unceasing complaint at the north wind and the loneliness; yet the leaves will burst again and buds into blossoms grow.

These are winter days and the river and the brooks are silent in their frozen retreats; yet soon will the grass grow upon the banks and the water of the brooklet sing in gladness over the golden sand and the fresh green rushes.

Gray is the sky and sullen; and dreary is the morning and dark and cold the night, for these are winter days; yet God will remember again the world, and the sunlight will filter in warm splashes through the rustling leaves, and and children will laugh upon the sward, lovers will wander under another moon and winter with the woes that it wears will be over and done.

Have you looked upon the face of your own through the coffin glass? Have men misunderstood and wounded you? Have hopes been determined in nothingness and dreams rudely shattered? Have friends proved untrue and fate unkind and your spirit saddened and broken? These, these are winter days; yet the summer will come again.

The night is dark, dark, but the morning will be glorious. The limbs are bare and creak complainingly, but in a little while the leaves will burst, and the water will sing in gladness, and lovers will walk beneath another moon, and the buds into blossoms grow. For God will remember again the world, and in remembering, will remember you.

The senatorial situation in Nebraska is the question uppermost in the minds of republicans these days. Norris Brown seems to have the call at this time, and the splendid speech delivered by him a few evenings since before the Young men's republican club of Lincoln has not lessened the public's regard for him. Millard is possible. He will receive scant support from any county outside his own. The railroads are pretending to be for him and will continue so to do until the vote is taken in the senate on the rate bill, then watch them take to cover. Mr. Wattles a very wealthy and companionable gentleman will doubtless be beneficiary of the Millard strength (or weakness.) With either of the above mentioned candidates Omaha may be considered out of running for the reason that neither possess those essentials which will be necessary to obtain outside support. If Douglas county could get together on some such man as John L. Webster there might be something doing. Webster is generally conceded to be the greatest lawyer in the state and one of the most accomplished gentlemen in the country. He would take high rank with most distinguished men in Washington and would be a credit to his state as well as of great service to the nation. The fight is getting warm and the candidates are coming out of the woods. There are a number of excellent candidates and the party is in the temper to choose only from those who are known quantities both as to ability and integrity.

Our past tense contemporary speaks of the aid it has given the Washington administration by its opposition to the trusts, thereby seeking to show some claim to its assertion that it is a republican newspaper. Do you know of anyone in favor of the trusts? A good way to show your faithfulness to a party is to vote its ticket and assist in the election of its candidates. Now that the Journal has solemnly asserted that it has aided President Roosevelt by its ponderous assaults on the beef trusts, would it be too great a presumption on our part to ask who the gang voted for last year, the year before last, the year before that and every other year when a Martin was not on the ticket? Of course, you need not answer if the question is embarrassing but if you have no objection the public would like to hear from you.

At a large mass meeting held in New York recently Miss Eva Booth addressed the monstrous throng while dressed in the tattered garb of a London flower girl. There were times during her address when thousands of persons were weeping over the woes of the poor as depicted by Miss Booth "I have lived all my life with the poor," said Miss Booth, "Trying to do something to make their lives easier, the burdens lighter. I have never stood between anyone and happiness." Think that last sentence over, you who spend your days in a blind search for wealth regardless of consequences. "I have never stood between anyone and happiness." That would make the finest epitaph ever penned by man.

There seems to be no division among the republicans as regards a straight republican city ticket. There are many men within the party who could be counted upon to give the city excellent service in the several offices. Whether or not a party ticket is nominated care should be taken in the selection of candidates on all tickets to see that men are nominated who have no axes to grind and who will not misrepresent the sentiment of the community in favoring special interests.

Make up your mind to the fact that Falls City is started towards bigger things. City property is today as low as it will ever again be. Idle workmen is to be a thing of the past and empty houses will be the exception. All that is required is a little active co-operation on the part of some of our wealthier men and the thing is done. Don't be a clam push, and push hard.

The Tribune doesn't want to swell up, but we were just a little complimented at receiving a card advertising the Millard hotel, the largest hotel in Omaha, on the back of which was printed an extract from these columns on what constitutes success.

Some question has been raised as to Peter Mortensen's eligibility as a candidate for Governor. It seems that he cannot be a candidate for the office while holding his present position as State Treasurer. Here's hoping that Peter is eligible. The state needs him as Governor and will get him if the law doesn't prevent.

Alice and Nick are to be married tomorrow, thank Heaven. We don't want to hear another word about them until the first baby appears, then there will be a valid excuse for newspaper comment.

Republicans Talk.

The undersigned republican voters of Falls City believing that a clean, orderly and respectable administration of the municipal affairs of our city during the next year, can be best attained under a straight republican administration, hereby request the republicans of our city to meet in convention at the court house on the 26th day of February, 1906, at 8 o'clock, p. m., for the purpose of nominating a full republican city ticket, including mayor, clerk, judge, treasurer, councilman and school board, to be voted for on April 3, 1906.
