

Now And Then.

The city election is over. Many of us are mad some of us are sore, and all of us that are either mad or sore are foolish. Each has done his little part in saving the country, and now that the country is saved let's spend a little time and effort in making Falls City a good place in which to live. One way to do this is to keep the city clean. Rake the leaves from the lawn, plant a few flower seeds, keep the grass trimmed (when it comes), prune the trees, mend the sidewalk, in fact, do anything and everything necessary to improving the appearance of your property. It seems that we are to have no lawn contest, but it might be worth while to keep clean just for the sake of appearances.

Some of our capitalists are considering the canning factory proposition. The Tribune sincerely hopes that something will result from the consideration. Falls City must awaken to the fact that no city ever created itself. The only way to make Falls City a greater Falls City is for the citizens to make it such. It will not become either a larger or better town of its own volition. Productive capital is the thing needed. Lending money on either personal or real estate security will not benefit the town because it is not productive capital. Money invested in manufacturing institutions is always a benefit because the money so invested is productive capital. By such investments labor is employed, wages are paid every Saturday night, a proportion of the wages eventually reach the channels of trade and every thing goes as lovely as a marriage bell. When this fact is fully appreciated, those who have money to invest may seek some way to make their capital productive, and should they do so, one of the ways we would suggest would be a canning factory.

The term "canning factory" is not one to conjure with in Falls City, but not withstanding the disastrous experience we have had with such institutions The Tribune confidently believes that it would be one of the best paying investments that could be made. Take the towns about us for instance. Barada got the canning factory craze about a year ago organized and incorporated for the purpose of building such an establishment. We all laughed, it was a joke. Didn't we know? Hadn't we tried it? Didn't we go busted? Sure Mike. Well Barada has taught us that it wasn't the canning factory proposition that busted us, it was the lack of business sense we displayed in its operation. Barada went deeply in debt to build her factory; she had a hail storm that ruined nearly half of the tomato crop planted for the purposes of canning. Yet, from the profits made the first year, she wiped out practically all of the indebtedness on the factory and now owns it nearly free from encumbrance. If Barada can do this why can't we also do it? Barada is miles from a railroad, we are situated more favorably. If one half the money Falls City has invested in mines and oil stock were invested in business propositions that would make capital productive, we wouldn't be complaining of dull times.

Take the Auburn canning factory as another instance. It has been running about seven years. Listen to this now and see what you think of it. The Auburn canning corporation has paid 100 per cent on the investment five of the seven years it has been in existence. How do they do it you ask? Well, we will tell you as much as we know about it. The company employs a manager at say, one hundred dollars a month. He does nothing but manage the canning factory. He does not depend on farmers to raise his stuff (that was one thing we went busted over,) but he rents several hundred acres of ground and employs men to farm it for the corporation. They plant several kinds of sweet corn all of which matures at different dates, consequently when the first corn is out of the way the second is ripe and ready for canning. When the season is over the stock is sold if the price is right; if it isn't, the company makes a bill of sale to some member of the corporation of all the year's product. He goes to the several banks borrows the money required to pay labor and other expenses and holds the year's product until the price is right and then sells. After liquidating all claims for borrowed money the surplus is divided between the members of the corporation in proportion to the shares. And there you are. These factories pay out each year from twenty to forty thousand dollars. This money is spent at home with the merchants. It is obtained from the jobbing houses that buy the canned stuff. Hence anywhere from twenty to forty thousand dollars of foreign money comes into the community to be distributed among the laboring people and the merchants every year. Auburn has done this with great profit to the company and the city. Why can't we? That is one of the ways to help Falls City and secure big profits for yourself. Don't you think it beats oil stock a city block?

Let us tell you of another scheme that looks good to us. The other day in Omaha the writer was talking to a friend and, in the course of the conversation, asked him what he was doing. Briefly, this is his reply. He had a little unemployed money so he went to a small town west of Omaha and started an alfalfa mill for the manufacture of alfalfa meal. It cost him but a few thousand dollars to establish the plant. Because of the very superior feeding qualities of alfalfa meal the demand for it is enormous. This particular mill running 24 hours a day is four months behind its orders and the same report comes from every similar mill in the country. His mill has grown until he now employs forty men. Every dollar of their wages is money that comes from other places and that would never reach the little town were it not for his mill. His capital is productive and is not only a great benefit to the town but is making him independently rich. If that will pay in Dodge County it will pay here. We can raise the best of alfalfa and plenty of it; if you do not believe this to be true, ask R. E. Grinstead or any other practical farmer who has experimented with it. A canning factory can be constructed for fifteen thousand dollars at the outside, an alfalfa meal mill for a little less. Two such institutions would bring thousands of dollars to our city, would fill many empty houses, would add many dollars to the merchants' ledger and would make big money for the owners if properly managed. If you have any money to invest, if you are a good Falls Cityan, if you want your capital to be productive, why not let up on loaning your money at six per cent, why not cut out the stock market, why not pass up the mining stock craze and investigate what others are doing in the avenues about which we have been writing?

Market Letter.

Stock Yards, Kansas City, Mo., Monday, April 2nd, 1906. The cattle run held up last week, 40,000 head coming in, about the same as the previous week, and 10,000 more than same week last year. Not quite as large a proportion were beef steers as the week before, but all through March the percentage of beef steers was larger than ever before for the same month, and probably larger than any month in the records of the yards. The very large number of cattle on feed in this territory together with the ability of the packers to handle larger numbers here than ever before accounts for this. The market was strong last week, all killing cattle, except menium to common heifer and veal calves making a gain of 10 to 15 cents. Conditions in the country are still unfavorable to the purchase of stock cattle or feeding cattle, and this class declined 10 to 15 cents last week.

The cattle run is unexpectedly large today, 12,000 head here, but the supply last half of last week was small, and packers and outside buyers were ready to make liberal purchases this morning. Market on killing stuff is steady, stockers and feeders strong. Top last week on beef steers was $5.85, top today $5.90, highest for about six weeks, a good many cattle at $5.50 to $5.80, and bulk of steers $4.70 to $5.35, very few steers below $4.50. Heifers and yearlings sell at $4.25 to $5.35, fair to good cows $3.75 to $4.50, bulls $3.00 to $4.25, veals 50 cents lower than a week ago, at $5.00 to $6.50, stockers and feeders $3.00 to $4.70 most sales in this class $3.50 to $4.50. Total cattle receipts for March increased 20 per cent over March a year ago, and 12 per cent over March two years ago, which was the largest previous March in cattle receipts at this market.

Hogs sold higher all last week will Friday, but closed the week 5 cents lower than high time. A feature was the increasing value placed on light weights, hogs below 200 pounds selling only 5 cents below the top hog. Market opened strong today, but broke 5 cents before the close top $6.40, bulk of sales $6.55 to $6.37 1/2. Run today 9000 head. Dealers expect liberal supplies and lower prices this week.

The mutton market improved steadily after Monday last week closing 5 to 15 cents above close of previous week.
