

DON'T BE DECEIVED!

The new catalogue of Montgomery-Ward relates a visit made by their representative to my store and the purchase he made. This catalogue says he paid $3.50 for a wool robe that they will sell for $3. The wool robe I sold him was made by the Northern Woolen Mills of Cleveland, Ohio. Montgomery-Ward cannot buy a single robe of this concern, and they haven't a wool robe in their establishment like the one I sold him. They make prices on certain goods in their catalogue which I give together with my price for the same articles:

MONTGOMERY-WARD		MY PRICE
.75	Brush	.65
$3.00	Wool Robe	$3.00
1.75	Leather Net	1.50
.75	Leather Halter	.75
.15	Six Snaps	.15
.45	Brush and Comb	.40
$6.85		$6.45

These are my regular prices and are not made to fit the occasion.

Worth While.

Do you believe more than one-half the people tell you?

Every time you help kick a man down you injure your own character.

Graduate your boy in industry, and his morals are pretty apt to be alright.

A helping hand is more to be appreciated than a helping word; we often forget much of what has been said, but we can never forget what has been done.

While we claim the right to defend our own opinions, let us concede the same right to our neighbors. And if we must differ, let it be good naturedly and not in anger.

Some folks who claim wisdom of the owl have only the hooting ability.

One friend who stands by you when you are assailed is worth a hundred who are ready to run, upon the first charge from the enemy's guns.

Your thoughts show more of you than you think.

The best way to fill the church is to fill the heart.

NOW AND THEN.

I heard Booker T. Washington lecture in Kansas City a short time since to several thousand of his people. For good horses and this celebrated colored educator stands in a class by himself. He said that he came to tell his race how to succeed. There was nothing new in his message, but it was a message that cannot be repeated too often. Stop taking expensive carriage rides, said Mr. Washington. "Don't you know," he asked, "that the people know you cannot afford it, that it is mere affectation? Stop spending your dollar and a half day wages on expensive party clothes and balls. You are not impressing anybody, you are merely making yourself ridiculous. Go to work and keep at work. Save your money, become a tax payer. If you want to be respected, if you want to impress people, the way to do it is to own your own home and fewer party dresses. If you want to be considered a factor in your community in spite of your color, work, work hard, save your money, buy that corner building and you can do it in a few years if you will do what I tell you—collect your rents every month and every acquaintance you have, black or white, will speak well of you and rejoice in your success. As the crowd was leaving convention hall one old darky who was disappointed in the speech, who probably was expecting to hear of some easy road to success, said in the hearing of the writer. "Huh, there ain't nothin' new about dat, anybody can succeed by workin'." And there was more of truth in the statement of this disappointed old fellow than he dreamed of. It will pay you and me to think it over.

Speaking of working and the success it brings reminds me of an instance right here at home. Some years ago a man who married a Falls City girl was out of employment and he and his wife came home to visit. Did he sit about and complain of adverse fortune? Not a bit of it, he sought employment, any honorable employment he could find. He got a job with one of Gilligan's bridge gang. He was not accustomed to manual labor his hands were soft and his employer told him when asked for employment that he could not stand the work. "Yes I can," he replied. "I am not going to live off my people or my wife's people. If I don't fill the bill, if my work is unsatisfactory, just tell me to quit." Well he went to work. His hands got raw but he didn't quit. He did a days work, a mans work every twenty four hours. He never complained nor shirked. He kept at it until he found something better. He was as careful, as painstaking in his new employment as he was in the old. Today he is after but a few years the manager of one of the largest lumber companies in Kansas City at a large salary and earning every dollar of it. This is no fairy story told to prove that "anybody can succeed by workin'." if you think so just ask John Gilligan what he thinks of Bert Wright as a "hand."

Down at at Warrensburg, Mo., last Friday night there was a debate between the Missouri Normal school at Warrensburg and the Nebraska Normal at Peru. The question was "Resolved that the United States should not permanently hold foreign possessions." One of the three Nebraska debaters was Earl Cline, son of Rev. and Mrs. Cline of this city, if they are not proud of their boy it is because they do not realize what is in him. Of the debaters he was the littlest fellow of all in size, but when he waded into his subject he was by far the biggest in the crowd. The large audience, friendly as it was to its home team, gave him a perfect ovation when he concluded his argument. He quoted facts and figures to the bewilderment of Missouri and to the astonishment of every auditor. He went after the arguments of his opponents like a whirlwind and when he sat down "there was nothing to it." Even the Missouri judge marked Earl way ahead of any one else, and the Nebraska judge, well he was a little afraid he was prejudiced and therefore was conservative and gave him 100. Of the three judges, one from Kansas, one from Missouri and one from Nebraska, all gave Earl first place and agreed that Nebraska's victory was won largely through his superiority.

The Tribune doesn't want to make a nuisance of itself but we do want to see a Fourth of July celebration in this city. Since we began the agitation of this subject we have heard many expressions favorable to the entertainment and many expressions of desire that something of the kind be arranged. Year after year we invite the farmers here to do their trading. Year after year we have given them no entertainment save a street fair to which they might come for a day and listen to hideous noises and spend their money for fakes and fakirs. Isn't it about time to ask them "to have something on us?" Get up a real old fashioned celebration, fill the day full of entertainment of the right kind. Let somebody read the declaration of Independence, give some fellow a chance to make a speech. Have a ball game, foot races, any and every old thing to make it a go, wind up with a real display of fireworks. We really ought to do it.

It seems to be the disposition of the council to permit but four saloons this year. We have three with us now and rumor has it that but one more will be given a license. The argument is made that six saloons are too many, and that with six the saloon keeper must of necessity violate the law to make expenses. With four it is believed that all can make a good living and keep strictly within the requirements of the law. There are two sides to this question. Some seem to think that if we are to have saloons at all, the more the better because of the revenue derived. If the saloon keeper cannot obey the law, the argument is made that he should get out of the business and take up some occupation wherein he could make a living without violating law. With but four saloons our revenues are cut down considerably from last year and some people seem to think it unreasonable that the public be deprived of a large sum of money in order that the saloon keepers may have a more profitable year.

A Clear Complexion and Bright Eyes.

In most cases a sallow, blotched complexion and dull heavy eyes are due to poor digestion and an inactive liver. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup aids digestion and stimulates the liver and bowels and makes the complexion smooth and clear. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup does not nauseate or gripe and is mild and pleasant to take. Refuse substitutes. For sale at Moore's Pharmacy.

County Convention.

Best Way to Sow Cane.

Cane is a crop of which every farmer should sow a little, at least. Its general utility about the farm makes this important. It affords a right good roughage, if properly grown; it is used with excellent results in covering sheds and outbuildings, and corn cribs during the winter months. And the use to be made of it determines to a considerable extent, how it should be grown.

Cane, unless sown thick, if sown broadcast, grows so rank in seasons of sufficient rainfall that it is extremely heavy and hard to handle. In fact, it takes a full grown man with well developed muscles and heavy fork to handle it at all. But it should not be grown this way as it is less valuable for feed. Cane sown broadcast should be sown thick, extremely thick. Then it may be cut with the binder and shocked with as much ease as shocking rye. Also, it may be easily fed from the shock. The bundles should be made small to insure curing in the shock.

If the land is foul it is a right good idea to sow the cane so that it may be cultivated. It may be sown in rows with the corn planter, or it may be sown in rows with the grain drill, certain holes being stopped. In this way it will grow rapidly and to considerable size, storing a little more sweetness, we believe. Then when the harvesting time comes, the corn binder is used with ease and nice effect.—Ex.
