Mr. Coons is a practical hog raiser who has followed the business more than 20 years, and he ought to know. Yesterday he had on this market two carloads of his own raising that brought $2,500, and they were but a sample of the kind that he raises right along. "But I raise the very best," said Mr. Coons. "The scrub hog is no better on the farm than the scrub cattle or any other kind of scrub stock. By raising the very best, and taking good care of them, I find them to be very profitable. I use thoroughbred boars, and high grade sows, and find that it pays well, as my hogs top the market most of the time."
