

SEE THAT FLUE?

It's new and different from any other. Made only in the

RIVERSIDE AER-HEATER

Cold air is drawn up from the floor through the flue and discharged at the top of the stove thoroughly heated.

It has all the radiating surface other stoves have, and heats by circulation as well. This means greater heating power, and

SAVES ONE-THIRD IN FUEL

It also means no cold floors, no cold corners or dead air spaces, but even temperature throughout the room. Every stove is a double heater of great power. Come in and examine them. Get a copy of our Booklet, "A Novel Race." It's free.

Spent More Than $1,000.

"My wife suffered from lung trouble for fifteen years, she tried a number of doctors and spent $1000 without relief, writes, W. W. Baker of Plainview, Neb. "She became very low and lost all hope. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar and, thanks to this great remedy, it saved her life. She enjoys better health than she has known in ten years." Refuse substitutes. For sale at all drug stores.

The late republican state convention was dominated by high ideals. The best evidence of this is the character of the men nominated. There has been no time before when the dominant party has been so free from questionable entanglements as is the republican party this fall.

NOW AND THEN.

How many of us know as much as we should about the children of our households? We are traveling the journey with them side by side, but how much of their road do we see? How many times in our ignorance of their natures are we guilty of some offense towards them which seems to their accusing little minds more than thoughtlessness. If we but knew more of the hopes, the desires, the thoughts of our children, more of their spiritual natures, there would be better men and women in the world, not only among those who teach children, but as well among those that children teach.

Do you remember what a perfect moonlight night last Saturday night was? How white the road ran into the distance, how dark the shadows on the lawn were in contrast with the white spots where the pale light of the moon filtered through the leaves? The children were romping noisily on the grass, all save one. He sat on the steps of the porch with his elbows on his knees and his chin in his hands. I don't think he heard the shouts of the children or knew they were playing, for there was wistfulness in his face and in his eyes was the shadow of a dream. The chill of the night air sent us to the house early and the children continued their romp in doors. All save one, and he sat in his little white gown before the flickering firelight in the grate with the same "some where else" look in his face, the same vague shadow in his eyes. So he sat when bed time came and the children were tired with the day. A long, long time after the house had become quiet I went to their room to see that they were covered up. They were all sound asleep, save one. He lay with eyes wide open seeing things in the dark that the other children did not know were there. He smiled as I turned out the light as though the things he saw never came to play except in the moonlight, the firelight or the dark.

If I had asked him of his fancies, if I had asked him what meant the dream shadow in his eyes, he would not have understood me for he is a very little boy. But I know that though walking side by side with my little boy that there is a portion of the journey through a land of fancies and beautiful dreams and through which he walks alone.

We meet, but are veiled in spirit; Familiar, and yet unknown: A realm of our inmost beings, Where we are alone, alone. In each is a strain peculiar On no other heart conferred, The song in the soul of the singer Is never heard.

Now that the moon is waning the wonderful star display of our fall season can be enjoyed. The heavens are sparkling with them and their light keeps the night from total darkness. To get some idea of the vastness of space in which they move, of the great distance the stars of the 12 magnitude are from us we will give two illustrations. Light travels around the earth eight times in one second. Light traveling at the rate of 200,000 miles a second takes 4,000 years to travel from the nearest of those stars to us. The star that we think we see is the light which started from that star two thousand years before Christ was born. Take the star Centauri. Suppose for illustration that we had a railroad built from Falls City to this star. Suppose that we take a trip to this star. We ask the ticket agent what the fare is, and he answers; "The fare is very low. It is only one cent for each hundred miles." "And what, at that rate, will a through one way ticket cost me?" "It will cost just 24 billion dollars," he answers. We buy the ticket and board the train. We set off at a tremendous rate. "How fast," we ask the brakeman, "are we going?" "Sixty miles an hour," he replies. That's good, we think, as this is a through train and makes no stops. "What time are we due to arrive," we ask. "We make good time," returns the brakeman, "we will reach our destination in just 48,663,000 years."

Some of our people have rather doubted the statement made in this column last week that laws were better enforced in Canada than in the United States. To the doubting ones we offer the following contribution from a Kansas editor.

Does prohibition prohibit? Well, in Toronto it does. I have had doubts as to whether certain things can be done by law, but I have had the doubt removed. I am writing on Sunday night and this has been the Sundayest Sunday I have ever seen in my life. Remember first that Toronto has a population of 270,000. The first thing I heard this morning was the church bells—chimes—ringing. As I write, at 9:00 o'clock p. m., they are still tolling off the hours.

I slept late this morning and could not get my breakfast at my hotel. I went to one of the leading and largest cafes in town to get something to eat—it was locked and the blinds drawn. It was Sunday.

I tried to buy a morning newspaper, but could not get one, as it is unlawful to sell papers on Sunday. The Sunday papers are published at 7 o'clock on Saturday night, and if you do not get one then you must do without it. I tried to buy a cigar—but could not. I had to shave myself, because there was no shop open for business. There are no saloons in Toronto. Bars are run in hotels—that's all. The bars are closed at 7 o'clock and not allowed to open again until 6 o'clock on Monday morning. They are closed, too. There are no side doors, back doors, or cellar doors to slip through—everything is absolutely shut up. It is no "monkey business" there's no winking at the law—it is rigidly absolutely enforced. Drug stores are opened simply to dispense medicines. If they have soda fountains or cigar stands that part of the store is in innocuous desuetude on that day.

It is not unlawful to serve food at restaurants or cafes, but many of them—like the one I went to close because that's their notion of duty as regards Sabbath. It is only within the past ten years that the street cars were permitted to run on Sunday and an effort is now being made, and likely to be successful, to stop running on Sunday again. Even the clerk in the office at the hotel where I am staying stopped stock still this morning.

I asked a man this morning if there was a league game of baseball in town today, thinking I might see something I could understand, and the pitying look of scorn he gave me chilled the marrow in my bones. Thinking of custom in Kansas City or Denver I inquired as to the theaters and what were the plays for to-night—my inquisitiveness pretty nearly started a riot.

Church going is no side issue in this town—it is the real business of life, Sunday observance is no joke in Toronto—it is a duty, which if neglected is a grievous sin and intolerable. The costliest building are the cathedrals. The prettiest sites are occupied by churches. The municipal administration is controlled church by people.

I never saw anything like it in America before—I never again expect to see it like when I leave here. I shall leave before next Sunday.

Had any man on earth told me such a thing could be done in any city of this size on the American continent, I should not have believed him. Prohibition prohibits when public sentiment wants it to prohibit. Sabbath laws can be enforced when the majority of the people want to have them enforced. I think they run this Sunday business a bit too far in Toronto.

SNUBBING THE PRESIDENT.

From the Saturday Evening Post.

Elmer Dover, who for a number of years was Mark Hanna's private secretary and who is well known in Washington society, is the father of a small girl who shows the true democratic spirit and who refuses to be awed by the great ones of the earth. One of the accomplishments of "Baby," as she is called, is her ability to answer the telephone, which she manages by climbing a chair.

On a certain dreary Sunday afternoon when the telephone bell rang, "Baby," being alone in the room, ran with swift feet to answer it. Her mother came into the room a few moments later and heard the little lady say in the most decisive tones:

"No, my papa will not come to see you this afternoon. He does not go out on Sundays. If you want to see him you will have to come here."

Turning her head, "Baby" remarked calmly to her mother:

"It is Mr. Roosevelt," Mrs. Dover snatched the receiver and found, sure enough, that her daughter had curtly refused a request made by the President of the United States! The President laughed heartily over the incident and afterward, when calling on the family left a card expressly "for Miss Dover."

A Narrow Escape.

The News-Press gives the following account of an accident at Humboldt last Saturday, which did not end in fatal tragedy only by the rare presence of mind of the plucky brakeman:

W. C. Shaw of Wymore, brakeman on one of the freight trains, had a narrow and thrilling escape from death while working with his train in the yards at Humboldt Saturday. Shaw was engaged in making a coupling and in some manner slipped and fell beneath the moving train, several cars passing over him before the crew discovered his plight and stopped the engine. Then it was found that the brakeman had fortunately fallen lengthwise in the center of the track and with rare presence of mind had shifted his position to one side close to the rail and had flattened down in such manner as to allow the cars to pass over without doing injury except to bruise and scratch his body and tear much of his clothing off. Employees of the Cooper & Linn mills saw the entire affair and ran to the victim's assistance, expecting to find him mangled and killed, but were surprised beyond measure to see him crawling from his perilous position unhurt except as above stated. Shaw completed his run.

And now it is Bailey of Texas who is said to be tied up with the corporations against the people. It is more important to elect the right kind of men to the senate than to do anything else. In this state every railroad is fighting Brown and assisting Thompson. The other day the democrats had a convention in Grand Island to nominate a legislative ticket and Thompson insisted on the nomination of railroad men for such offices. Isn't it reasonable to believe that this was with the approval of those men who are supporting him in their efforts to beat Brown.

Intervention In Cuba.

The Cuban republic has been demonstrating for sometime that it has not reached sufficient strength to walk alone. Trouble has been incessant and for the past two months the rebels have been giving the government all kinds of trouble. The situation became so acute last week that President Palma resigned thus leaving the country without a head. Fearing some such condition as this President Roosevelt had sent Secretary of War Taft to the island, who, immediately upon the resignation of Palma, intervened on the part of the United States and became for the time being Governor of the island. Six thousand American troops have been landed to preserve order and subdue the rebel forces that are menacing the peace of the republic.

The United States acted hastily when it promised independence to Cuba, thereby making it impossible to take over the island as we did Porto Rico. Many were the people who edicted the present trouble when the little republic was launched. Porto Rico has gone forward under the control of the United States while Cuba has gone backward and has been in a constant turmoil. Intervention on the part of the United States probably means the permanent control for all time to come.

The Burlington has recently made some changes in its train services at Nebraska City which do not meet the approval of the business men of the town. The papers of that place are urging the business men and others to act at once and bring the road to terms. This is what the News of that place has to say on the subject—"Not content with stopping the east freight the Burlington is talking of sending the Lincoln passenger train which has been for so many years under charge of Tom Ryan, through to Falls City and return in the morning. The same will be done with the freight train. This will make Nebraska City but little more than a whistling station, as the trains will stop here but for a few minutes and it will mean that several families will be compelled to remove to Falls City.—Plattsmouth News Herald.

The present trouble in Cuba may not result in annexation, but some time and in some way the people of the island will become a part of the United States. In our opinion a mistake was made that this was not done in the beginning and this mistake will sometime be rectified by the unanimous desire not alone of our people but of the Cubans as well.
