Plan The Rotation Now.

While it may seem rather early to begin discussing farm crops of 1907, it is nevertheless a fact that it is not only the best time for such discussions but it is also time to begin some of the actual work connected with the production of the crop. Through the winter season many farmers who are perhaps somewhat disappointed with the yield from portions of their farm the previous year and who, through reading farm papers and hear ing lectures at the farmers' institutes, have determined to adopt a more intelligent system of rotation and are now planning for it.

But there is need at this time even to more than merely plan for the work that is to be done next spring. Study out what fields will need a certain crop, and what you will put on the other fields that go into the scheme of rotation and determine in advance the acreage of each crop that you will grow on your farm in 1907. Then get busy with the actual work which can be done at this season and so often cannot be satisfactorily done later in the spring when other work is crowding. There will be some fields that will re quire a dressing of manure. In many sections the field that is to be seeded to one of the leguminous crops will show a much better stand if it is top dressed with stable manure this winter. The spots in the field that require fertilizing are better known to the farmer who has farmed over them than to anyone else, and he will need no advice as to the place to haul the manure that lies about the barn. In many cases, there will not be sufficient manure to cover all the ground that really needs it, so the farmer must study the needs of the different crops in his rotation and put it where it is most needed.

Now is a good time to hunt up the clover and alfalfa seed that will be planted, too, and by buying it now good seed may be obtained, while if the buying pare for this contingency, also, the Journal buys its supply. These are merely offered in
