The prospect of three days without saloons has produced a very worried look on the faces of some of our people.

The boom has arrived; we are going to have a band stand in the square and a closet in the basement of the court house.

To the fellow that likes a trade we want to negotiate a lawn mower all sharpened and oiled and ready for the fray for a pair of mittens, or ear bobs or a muffler.

John L. Webster used to have the reputation of the champion fancy vest wearer in the state. T. J. Mahoney of Omaha seems to have him beaten to a pulp if we are to judge from the appearance during the last three weeks.

To those who like oratory in its finest garb the arguments in the Miles case should prove very attractive. Not only the local talent will engage in the windjamming, but Mahoney, Atwood and Webster, three of the finest speakers in the west, will also participate.

Sometime in the dim and distant future, long after the hopes and fears, the ambitions, the struggles, the disappointments of the present generation have gone the way of all things vain, some old Falls Cityite will roll over in his grave, brush the mold from his eye wipers and ask the question: "what has become of the Miles will case?"

We sincerely hope that Mr. Long will not feel it necessary to answer Bill McCray's grand stand defense recently published in the Stella Press. Bill is in bad repute with the voters of his district and is using the Farmers Institute matter to leave the impression that he has been standing for his home people. The attempt is so cheap and disgusting that a man of Mr. Long's standing can hardly afford to enter into a controversy with a man like McCray on such a subject.
