Wisdom Condensed.

A booklet issued monthly by the Buck Stove Co., of St. Louis, has a genius on its staff. While we are not in the stove business we always borrow this book and never fail to derive great enjoyment from its pages. We print a few samples of its condensed wisdom:

Forgive your friends—your enemies are best forgotten.

People who live in glass houses should not take baths in the day time.

Why spend so much time in trying to answer the unanswerable, when there is so much work to do?

Forget it. It really isn't worth worrying about.

The greatest evil in the world is fear. Think it out.

Happiness is a point of view—only that and nothing more.

He that voluntarily continues ignorant is guilty of all the crimes which ignorance produces.

If your ability to earn has outstripped your capacity to enjoy you are a candidate for the scrap heap.

If you are anxious to be a factor in the world keep away from the stuff that makes it go round—and round.

George Seton Thompson, who has a famous brother, and who himself is entitled to fame for his good heart, good head, and good printing, arises to remark that it takes less time to learn to do a thing right than to explain why you did it wrong.

Advertising success is no more an accident than the ball player's batting average is a streak of luck. It's putting the right hits in the right place—and keeping the good work up.

I am thankful for your praise and I bow the neck to your censure; but I have that within me which cheers more than the one and chastens more than the other.

As yesterday is history and tomorrow may never come, I will do all the business I can honestly, have all the fun I can reasonably, do all the good I can willingly, and save my digestion by thinking pleasantly.

Did you ever stop to entertain that beautiful thought that if all the dumbfoolishness possessed now by the human race could be gathered together and lined up alongside of us, the first feller to come along would say to it, "Why, hello Solomon!"

If you and I—just you and I, should laugh instead of worry, if we should grow—just you and I—Kinder and sweeter hearted, Perhaps in some near by and by A good time might get started; Then what a happy world 'twould be For you and me—for you and me.

A splendid new factory is being built just across the way. I stood and watched a workman cutting a block of stone which is to form a part of the ornamentation of the facade. Chip by chip the pieces fell away until, at last, a finely proportioned form was revealed.

By a process of elimination beauty was created.

By this same process a tree maintains its symmetry. The wind is nature's pruner. Once let a branch o'erstep its rights and the elements all conspire against it. A strong, healthy tree is constantly casting off branches as well as leaves, bark, fruit—it is ever dying, that it may live.

By this same process the human form rounds out its perfection. Interfere with it and grace and health are lost.

Growth necessitates the casting off of the old as well as the taking on of the new.

To unlearn is as necessary as to learn.

Our clinging affinity for the dead systems of yesterday hinders our progress today.

Nature, if left to herself, eliminates the unnecessary.

Our little facts are at best half truths—as the light of tomorrow will reveal.

This of our Forefathers?

During the early part of the seventeenth century the fashions in millinery which obtained in this country were practically facsimiles of those in vogue in England and on the Continent of Europe in respect to character and amplitude. Hence, both Puritans and settlers of English decent outside of New England were very much up to date in the matter of fashionable wear, the best named especially so, if the records of the time may be believed. Thus we find that in 1634, fourteen years after the founding of the Puritan colonies, "modish" dress was so taking up the time and attention of the women colonies that the general court of Massachusetts found it necessary to issue this edict: "That no person, man or woman, shall hereafter make or buy any apparel, either Woolen, Silk or Linen with Lace on it or Silver or Gold Thread, under penalty of forfeiture of said Clothes. Also no person, either man or woman, shall make or buy any slashed clothes other than one slash in each sleeve and another on the back. Also all cut-work, embroideries, or needlework, Caps, Bands or Rails are forbidden hereafter to be made and worn under the aforesaid penalty. Also all Gold and Silver Girdles, Hat Bands, Belts, Ruffles and Beaver Hats are prohibited to be bought and worn hereafter."

Mushroom Bows for Wee Girls.

The small girl's coiffure will be embellished this year by a coquettish ribbon rosette of four loops and two ends, which may be worn either on the top or on the side of the head. To obtain this effect a yard and a half of ribbon from three to four inches in width should be first tied in two loops, each three inches in length; when these are secured, tie two more loops of the same length. This leaves two ends. Flatten the bows with the fingers, pull out the loops and you have a mushroom rosette suitable for any occasion. These bows are daintiest in Dresden ribbon.

Good Sense From Lou Shelly.

The primary is about to be pulled off and the press will begin to name the candidates and the dear people will do the rest. They have already begun to look up the record of Judge Sedgwick. One individual has written to The Sunday State Journal wanting the very important information if the judge was ever a railroad attorney. Why don't he want to know if he ever rode on the "cow catcher" or if he ever salted his cattle before selling them, or stood on the scales when he was selling his grain. The Journal assures us that the judge was never a railroad attorney. We are glad to know that all ex-railroad attorneys are barred from holding office. The Gazette is for Judge Sedgwick and was for him before we had his pedigree.—Fairbury Gazette.

Women's Rights in Hotels.

A suit is shortly to be brought in the New York courts against a prominent hotel for the purpose of testing one of its rules which bars women who are without masculine escorts from its restaurant. The suit is to be brought by Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, a daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, who, like her mother, is a prominent suffragist and has always been to the fore in the demand for equal rights.

Mrs. Blatch, with a woman friend, entered the roof garden of one of the most fashionable hotels in the metropolis and was refused service by the waiter. A complaint to the manager brought forth the information that the rule was made for the protection of respectable women and that, as it had to be stringently enforced, no exception could be made. It was explained to Mrs. Blatch that if it was not in operation she would be subject to annoyance by undesirable women. In reply the lady stated that while she had been annoyed it had always been by undesirable men, and she remarked that no effort was made to keep an undesirable class of men from the restaurant. She contended that a woman should be allowed to satisfy her hunger when and where she pleased, and has proceeded to take steps to test the right of hotels to rule against women. The suit brings forward an interesting phase of equal rights. There can be no doubt that there are wise and sufficient reasons for the enforcement of this rule, which is in operation in a number of the large New York restaurants, and that if it were not in operation an undesirable class would take advantage of its absence.

On the other hand, Mrs. Blatch's contention that in the matter of satisfying her hunger a woman should have the same privileges as a man has fairness to recommend it. Such problems should be worked out to bring about the best practical results, and often a question of personal rights should be made subservient to the greatest number. Therefore, it will be interesting to note just what decision will be reached by the New York court when the case comes before it.

The opponents of Judge Sedgwick, who is a candidate for re-nomination to the position of the supreme court, are seeking to create prejudice against that distinguished jurist by raising the cry that "he is a railroad man." This is important, if true but mere declaration will carry no weight with thinking men unless supported by the evidence. The fact is that during all the years that Judge Sedgwick has practiced law in Nebraska he never was a railroad attorney. He never appeared for any railroad in any suit, which is a remarkable statement to make of a lawyer of his prominence at the bar. It goes without saying that he had opportunities galore to identify himself with railroad business, for the roads are looking for good lawyers and the judge has always stood high in his profession. In every instance he had consistently refused to take these corporation cases for no other reason than that he preferred to be on the other side—it was more satisfying to him to protect and defend the interests of the people with whom he mingled, when they came into conflict with the railroads, than it was to fight the legal battles of the latter, even at higher fees. And so it happens that Judge Sedgwick never was a railroad attorney and never appeared for the railroads in a suit at law. The politicians who are trying to discredit him should at least stick to the truth. If the so-called reformers were consistent they would rally to his support instead of feigning to scatter broadcast misleading statements.—Tecumseh Chieftan.

Over in Woodbine, New Jersey, is the first city actually run by Jews since the fall of Jerusalem. It has a record of but one arrest, a Gentile who got drunk! There is no crime or poverty in Woodbine, and tho the inhabitants are unused to political rights, civic life runs smoothly. This is but one instance of the success of Jewish Colonies in the United States. One of the unusual features of these colonies in the stress laid on agriculture and agricultural pursuits. Although the Jew is usually regarded as a strong factor in the commercial field, many, when left to their natural inclinations, seek farming and outdoor life.—The Circle.

Former Nebraskan Talks.

We are in receipt of the following letter which we publish in full feeling that our readers are always interested in a "square deal."

Long Beach, Cal., Aug. 6, '07.

To the Editor of The Falls City Tribune, Falls City, Neb.

Dear Sir:—In a late issue of my former home paper I find presumably an editorial copied from your paper, commencing as follows: "The Falls City Journal has seen fit to characterize Judge Sedgwick as a railroad hireling, etc." Now I am an entirely disinterested party, at present a citizen and voter of this state and so far as I know now, never expect to return to Nebraska and have no interest whatever in your politics excepting the "square deal" which every honest man hopes for.

When the "Falls City Journal" says that Judge Sedgwick is a "railroad hireling" they simply lie, either ignorantly or willingly as the case may be. One of the first so-called railroad cases that Judge Sedgwick ever tried was when he was first elected as one of the district judges of the fifth judicial district. I was personally interested in the case and justice demands of me to say that while the B. & M. railroad as defendant, practically won the case, no plaintiff ever had fairer rulings and instructions than was given by Judge Sedgwick at the time alluded to. Now it is wholly immaterial to me who or whom the republican party of Nebraska selects as its standard bearer for the supreme court of your state, but one thing is sure, it will be impossible for you to select a man better qualified, more disinterested and honest than Judge Sedgwick; a man who is in love with his profession, a deep student and thinker, an accurate reasoner. The question with him is, what is the law? When that question is solved by him, you will have a decision closely allied to the "square deal."

Yours truly,
R. L. SNODGRASS.
