Why Blue Monday.

"Monday is the busiest day of the week for me," said the physician to the man who had been waiting half an hour to see him. "I won't try to put up a bluff and tell you that my office is so crowded every day in the week, for it isn't; but I get a grist of office patients nearly every Monday. Every physician of any reputation has the same experience. Why? All on account of Sunday. People do all sorts of foolish things on that day, because they have time to, and they pay for it. In the first place, people eat indigestible, rich food on Sunday that they would not think of eating on another day. They eat too much also; in fact, some people nibble away all day, and in consequence they have indigestion—for no one has indigestion so quickly or so acutely as the person who is used to regular, wholesome living, and once in a long while tries the unwholesome food and a trip to the doctor's always in order Monday. Then, again, Sunday gives a person more time to think of his ills. A man who will stoically bear a pain on working days and drive it away by his very snubbing of it will get frightened at the slightest ache on Sunday. He gets to thinking about it and comes to the conclusion that it is a serious symptom. So he goes in to see a physician Monday.—N. Y. Press.

Don't worry about your kidneys when you can obtain 30 days' treatment of Pineules for $1.00. These little globules bring relief in the first dose. Backache, Lumbago and Rheumatism yield quickly. If not satisfied your money refunded. This is a fair offer you can't lose. Sold by A. G. Wanner, druggist.

Mrs. Bert Simanton and baby went to Stella Wednesday to visit relatives during the picnic while Mr. Simanton is there with the Falls City band.

Robert Steele returned Sunday night from Salem where he had been attending chautauqua.

Some Turnips.

Speaking of turnips as a crop where other things fail, it was just thirty years ago this summer that the grasshoppers destroyed the crops in Richardson county. The writer was running a little paper at Falls City then, and many of the delinquent subscribers were wondering how they would be able to pay up. An old friend who had taken the paper for a long time said that he would have to stop it until he grew something. We remonstrated and finally he agreed to continue if we would take our pay in turnips. We told him to take them to the house and put them in the cellar. In the evening when we went home we found the cellar so full of turnips that we could not close the doors. Turnips that year were selling at two dollars for a wagon load with the sideboards on, and we had received that sort of a load for a year's subscription. But after the grasshoppers had raided the country even turnips looked good to some people.—Geo. Marvin in Beatrice Sun.

It is a well known fact that persons living in the pine forests do not suffer from kidney diseases. One dose of Pineules at night usually relieves backache. 30 days treatment $1.00 Your money refunded if not satisfied Sold by A. G. Wanner, druggist.

Speaking of fancy calendars, the finest thing we have ever seen is an imitation burnt wood design of the bold knight of old, put out by the H. M. Jenne, the Falls City shoe dealer. We saw one the other day and went into that beautiful store and begged a calendar. It struck our fancy, and so did the arrangement of that store.—Kansas Democrat.

NOW AND THEN.

Richard Mansfield is dead. A great many who read this may never have heard of him, and a still larger number may never have sat within the spell of his magic genius. But to the writer Richard Mansfield was one of the great men of his age. Though I never knew him nor saw him off the stage, it was with the sense of personal loss that I read the headline last week announcing his death. He was the greatest actor of his age, greater, far greater than Henry Irving, and in many essentials the equal of the later Booth. There is none to succeed him, for in his transcendent genius he stood utterly alone.

The story of his life is one of high ideals accomplished through soul trying hardships. Mansfield knew public sentiment, none better than he, yet he defied it, and what is far greater—mastered it. The box office was not the goal he saw, neither did he prostitute his wonderful art at the shrine of commercialism. In the days of vaudeville and musical comedies a night of Mansfield was as the peace and quiet of home after the clamor of a mob. To hear him was a liberal education; to understand and appreciate him one of the real and enduring pleasures of life.

The writer has traveled many hundred miles to hear this master of the American stage and the memory of him and his art will remain through the passing years. I have gone from the theater to my hotel with sleep driven from me by the spell of his genius. I have sat in the darkness listening sub-consciously to the hum of a mighty city far below me, and in the noise have heard him as Prince Karl, who wanted to be as other young men, unfettered by the restrictions of royalty; who wanted to play and love and dream even as you and I. Poor Karl, "who would smile twice in a year and had they let him." In fancy I have seen him as Beau Brummel again, when all that he loved and prized was taken from him, and in the poverty and squalor of his garret imagined himself back in the old days and dining with kings and queens and ladies of high degree. Poor Beau Brummel! How the jerky sobs would rise in one's throat as you watched this aged, ragged, friendless old remnant who had seen better days lead the creatures of his fancy, to the head of his miserable table and seat them with a grace and delicacy that alone remained of all he once was.

I have since read many articles on Beau Brummel, and though he lived in another land and an earlier century, so great and masterly was Mansfield's art, that I always think, not that I have seen him play this character, but that I in fact have seen and known Beau Brummel.

Mansfield knew his capabilities long before the world recognized them. His ideals were high and he maintained them through great trials. He walked the streets of London penniless and starving rather than lend himself to the cheap and trashy of the stage. By degrees he advanced towards his life's ambition until at last he came into his own. His last and greatest production was Peer Gynt which he was playing last October when he was taken ill. He thought and the world hoped he would soon be better, but it was not to be. The ghostly prompter had beckoned from the wings, his last lines were said, his exit had come. The curtain is rung down, the house is empty, the lights are out, the great soul is departed—Richard Mansfield is dead. Peace to his ashes.

A Good Indian Prayer.

O powers that be, make me sufficient to my own occasions. Teach me to know and to observe the rules of the game. Give me to mind my own business at all times, and lose no good opportunity of holding my tongue. Help me not to cry for the moon or over split milk. Grant me neither to proffer nor to welcome cheap praise; to distinguish sharply between sentiment and sentimentality, cleaving to the one and despising the other. When it is appointed for me to suffer, let me, so far as humanly may be possible, take example from the dear, well bred beasts, and go away quietly, to bear my sufferings by myself. Give me always to be a good comrade, and to view the passing show with an eye constantly growing keener, a charity broadening and deepening day by day. Help me to win, if win I may—and this, O Powers! especially—if I may not win make me a good loser. Amen!—Exchange.

Past September Weather.

For the month of September covering a period of nineteen years, the normal temperature has been 68 degrees. The coldest September was in 1890, when the average temperature for the month was 63 degrees. The warmest month was in 1897, with an average temperature of 77 degrees. The highest temperature recorded during any September during the nineteen years was 101 degrees on the 13th of the month, 1893. The coldest day was on the 29th, 1899 with a temperature of 29.

The average date on which a killing frost has occurred is October 22. The earliest frost has occurred during the nineteen years was September 30.

The average amount of precipitation for the month of September has been 3.85, and the average number of days on which the precipitation has been .01 or more is eight. The greatest monthly precipitation was 10.90 in 1905, and the least .26 in 1888.

Enjoined a Fire Sale.

Three men arrived in Saline, Kans., recently and announced a fire sale of clothing and dry goods. Merchants induced the city council to hold a special meeting at which an ordinance was enacted providing that strangers conducting fire sales in the city should procure a license. The license fee was fixed at $250 a week.

The out-of-town merchants went before the district court with an application for a temporary restraining order which was granted by Judge Rees. The five members of the city police force and the city attorney were restrained from interfering with the sale. The doors of the sale building were opened Aug. 31st at 3 p. m., and immediately an under sheriff was sworn in as a member of the police force. He served a warrant issued for the arrest of the men. They were taken into police court where they gave $100 bonds each, and a hearing of the case will be had early this week. The members of the firm say that the new ordinance is unconstitutional.
