The next question for republicans is, who will we have for vice president?

Of the 200 republican papers in Nebraska, less than a score of them have declared for any other candidate but Taft.

A German statistician has estimated that there are 260,000 words in the English vocabulary. How thankful we should feel that a certain lady in this neighborhood is not familiar with them all.

It is reported that the women of Chicago have resolved that they will wear no feathers in their hats except such as are furnished by the crow. If true, more men than ever will have their crow to pick.

It is time that those who are interested in the welfare of Falls City lay their plans for the year 1908, if the city is to make any forward steps. Let us be awake to our interests and do what we can to make our city a better and more progressive town.

Thaw's attorneys in their attempt to prove him insane, it is said will prove that he sent his wife eighty-four pounds of beef in one order. If some of those New Yorkers had the privilege of entering the cellars of some of our Nebraska farmers, they would see that eighty-four pounds of meat was a very scant supply.

The supreme court of Pennsylvania has declared the 2 cent rate law unconstitutional by a divided vote of 4 to 3. They held that the law was confiscatory of private property and therefore invalid. We need not be surprised at such a decision from a state which has become so notorious for its state house scandals, its many mine horrors and its theater horrors. A people who will not awaken from a lethargy which permits such a state of corruption to exist among them are apt to spring surprises upon the country.

We observe that "Mr. Taxpayer" comes forth in another communication through the columns of his ally, the News, and assails the city administration. Mr. Taxpayer is not unknown to the public. If our memory serves us correctly, he is the gentleman who came forth as the angel of peace at the republican convention here in the city last spring, bearing the flag of truce and announcing his desire to bury the hatchet and to have peace. It was at his suggestion, we believe, that the republican city convention was adjourned, and a citizen's meeting held. It seems, too, that he is the individual, who after announcing his desire for harmony, endeavored to bring forth another candidate for mayor than the one who was nominated. Oh, consistency, thou art a jewel! Bury the hatchet! You certainly have not done it. Now, Mr. Taxpayer, why not suggest such remedies as you think may be helpful to the city, if you see that any such are needed. Why not forsake your spirit of criticism and assist instead of hinder the city administration in its performance of its duties? Any suggestion will be gladly received.

George Hessler bought a horse at Jim Randall's sale, for which he paid the sum of $190.

FOR MAYOR.

For some time past we have heard the name of Warren Hutchins favorably mentioned in connection with the office of mayor at the spring election. Mr Hutchins is one of those broad, conservative men who would look after a public charge of this nature without fear or favor, and his experience as councilman has been fitting him for the head office of the city. We are glad to see the numerous friends of Mr. Hutchins pushing his name to the front for this office and hope that they may be able to get his consent to accept the nomination. As a business men's administration this is a move in the right direction.

A Cowardly Attack.

The cowardly and brutal assault made by the Journal last week on Joe Bauer, Charley Zoellers, Henry Siemering and Joseph Glasser marks the high point of slander so far reached by this irresponsible sheet. These men are accused of about every offense possible, chiefest among which is the charge that they have drawn more salary than the law allows to supervisors in counties of less than 20,000 inhabitants.

The Journal doesn't mention the fact that the flood of last summer put work on these gentlemen far greater than was ever before done by any board of supervisors.

The Journal doesn't mention that these men worked day and night for weeks in an effort to get the highways in condition for travelers therover. That they sometimes drove through severe weather and over bad roads as high as forty-five miles in a day.

This Journal doesn't believe that these men should be paid for such labor. The Journal doesn't mention that one Frank Martin while drawing the salary of county attorney filed a written request with the board asking for more salary because Richardson county had more than 20,000 inhabitants.

The Journal doesn't mention that under the constitution a census of the state shall be taken every ten years. Such census has not been taken in this state, and the attorney general of Nebraska one time sent a written opinion to this county saying that if the state did not perform its duty by taking a census, the board could, by other satisfactory evidence, ascertain the probable population and fix salaries and fees upon the basis of such investigation.

The Journal doesn't mention that the deputy hire of some of the county officers is based on a 20,000 population.

The Journal doesn't mention that some of its favorites on the board have drawn more than the law allows on a population of less than 20,000.

No indeed, the Journal wants to malign and abuse these men because they have the Journal gang sized up at its proper valuation.

Bauer, Zoeller, Siemering and Glasser will be living in Richardson County, honored and trusted by their friends and acquaintances long after the last of the Journal crowd has folded his tent and stolen away.
