The Unpleasant Manner.

William III. was one of the greatest kings England ever had, and also one of the most unpopular. He commanded the respect of Britons and of the world, but he couldn't command the affection of a soul, and he was the loneliest mortal who ever wore a crown.

The manner that repelled people and made him as lonely as an anchorite, was his misfortune and not his fault; for he craved the companionship he could not win or keep, and there was tender sentiment in the heart that people supposed was frozen; as witness, the finding on his dead body of a carefully treasured curl of his wife's hair.

Governor Hughes, of New York, is the victim of a similar misfortune. He is a great man, and a good man, and has accomplished much in the world, and the people admire him for what he has done; but there's no one to love him, none to caress, for he has the manner of a bear with a sore head.

He has absolutely no tact, and that absence is fatal to the ambitions of any man. He may appreciate the efforts of those who have helped to elevate him, but he finds it impossible to show his appreciation; he does a favor as though administering a rebuke, and rebukes as though imposing a sentence of death.

His friends are not so lost in admiration of his noble qualities that they will forgive rebuffs and apparent ingratitude; they will not try to console themselves with the reflection that the governor's manner is a mere cloak, that behind a frowning providence he hides a smiling face; they are human, and they want appreciation. And so down goes McGinty to the bottom of the sea, dressed in his best suit of clothes. In other words, Mr. Hughes has worn out the patience of his best friends by his brusqueness, his insensibility, his apparent selfishness.

Which goes to show that sterling worth is none the worse for the tinsel of cordiality and the buckram of smiles.—W. A. White

Square Deal and Square Meal.

"To keep the dinner pail full, to keep the pay-car going, to keep the factory busy, to keep the workmen employed, to keep the present wages up."

The foregoing is the platform of the National Prosperity Association which was organized in St. Louis Friday night by some of the most prominent business men of that city, and which, it is hoped, will ultimately be made national in scope. As a model platform and a slogan of progress this association's announced purpose is commended to all political parties. Surely it covered the entire field of national needs, for full dinner pails, regular pay cars, busy workmen and good wages mean a return of the good times so generously in evidence before the recent legislative onslaught upon capital and labor was made.

The National Prosperity Association should number in its membership every live American citizen, whether he be capitalist, factory owner, railway official, small dealer, artisan or laborer. So interdependent are the elements of our complex industrial society that one class of workers cannot be prosperous without the effect being felt by all, and, conversely, one class of workers cannot be hampered, demoralized and eliminated without all others feeling the ill effects of such a situation. The new organization says it has nothing to do with the past. It looks forward. It believes in a square deal and a square meal for every man. Without whimpering over the mistakes and wrongs of the past, it now proposes by constructive action to restore in this country that high level of prosperity that was disturbed by thoughtless legislation.

It is quite true, as is pointed out by the address of the new association, that there is nothing fundamentally wrong with this country. We have suffered no extensive crop failures. Our securities ought to be just as safe and as much in demand as before. The present general turning toward constructive action is the evidence of a determining second sober thought on the part of our people who refuse longer to be carried away by the rant and hypocrisy of selfish politicians who hesitate at no measure of destruction in advancing their own selfish ends. The place to begin the restoration of prosperity is with the workingmen. No true prosperity can be enjoyed in this or any other country until the workingmen are fully employed at good wages. The best evidence of the square deal is the square meal. That the so-called "square deal" so noisily proclaimed of late was not the genuine article is evidenced by the thousands of idle workingmen in this country today. There can be no true square deal that is not fair and just to all, rich and poor, high and low, capitalist and laborer.—K. C. Journal.

Tired nerves with that "no ambition" feeling that is commonly felt in spring or early summer can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. One will absolutely note a changed feeling within 48 hours after beginning to take the Restorative. The bowels get sluggish in the winter, the circulation often slows up, the kidneys are inactive and even the heart in many cases grows decidedly weaker. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is recognized everywhere as a genuine tonic to these vital organs; it builds up and strengthens the worn-out weakened nerves; it sharpens the falling appetite and universally aids digestion; it always quickly brings renewed strength, life, vigor and ambition. Try it and be convinced. Sold by all dealers.

For Good Roads.

Washington, D. C., May 2, 1908.

The following from Congressman Pollard is self-explanatory and should prove interesting to all our readers:

My Dear Sir:—I desire once more to call your attention to a question that seems to me to be of the greatest importance to the farming communities of Nebraska. I do not wish to be understood as appearing in the light of interfering in any way with the policy your Board agree should be followed by your county concerning its public highways, but I do desire to call your attention to the fact that I can have sent to your county-seat without cost to you, from the Washington Department of Good Roads, a skilled engineer who will confer with your Board in an advisory capacity as to the best improved and thoroughly up-to-date methods of improving the public highways of your county. Of course, you can adopt his plan or not as you may think best.

My service on the Agricultural Committee of the House has brought forcibly to my mind the fact that the middle-western states are far behind the other sections of the country in the matter of improved roads. The Washington Bureau of Good Roads is carrying on co-operative work throughout the South, East and the far West, which has resulted in a very decided improvement of their public highways. I am very anxious that some of the public funds appropriated by Congress for this purpose shall be used in Nebraska, especially in my own district. In the black loam soils of the South they are introducing, under the supervision of the Washington office, what is known as burnt-clay and sand-clay roads which are giving the very best results. These roads are inexpensive and seem to me to be entirely practical in Southeastern Nebraska.

I should like to have you take up with your Board of County Commissioners the question of permitting one of these engineers from Washington to meet with you and discuss the question of what type of road is best suited to your county and the best means of introducing the same. Should you desire to carry on co-operative work with the department I can have the Bureau here send out an expert engineer who will superintend the work until some local party is competent to take it up in his place.

The agricultural bill now pending in Congress carries an appropriation of ninety thousand dollars which is to be used in carrying on co-operative demonstration work in improving the highways of the various states of the Union. Up until the present time there has not been a dollar spent in Nebraska. This service that I have suggested will not cost your county a penny unless, of course, you desire to co-operate with the government in improving your highways. I shall be very glad, indeed, to have you advise me whether I cannot send one of these engineers to consult with your county Board along the lines indicated.

Hoping to hear from soon, as Congress will adjourn in the near future, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
ERNEST M. POLLARD.
