

HOW STRANGE

Why Dont They Pay More Attention to Their Highways

It is certainly surprising to note the number of substantial farmers who pay little or no attention toward beautifying the home and general surroundings. The hedges are allowed to go untrimmed from year to year, shutting out the view from the public road, of fine, fertile fields, that are generally well farmed and are attractive. The weeds along the roads are nearly as high as the hedge, while the yard about the home is oftentimes no more presentable.

A man in town who owned a $20,000 home no better kept would be considered slovenly and thrifty, tasty neighbors would look for a different neighborhood. As an example of twentieth century farming we call your attention to what is known for miles around as Pennsylvania avenue, between this city and Morrill, Kans. Were the farms of this entire county kept in the same slightly condition it would enhance the value $25 per acre in the eye of any home-seeker from the east. In fact these farms are more attractive than many of the homes in surrounding towns, including Falls City.

The human family are becoming so absorbed in doing just those things that will cash in at any time that they forget all about the home surroundings, the lawn, fences, and little things that make the place attractive, are either secondary or let go entirely. What a contrast when you ride through a country where the hedge on every farm is trimmed to a uniform height and the farmers unite in plying the Missouri drag to the public highway for miles along their respective homes whenever needed, and then drift into a neighborhood where these things were never thought of. Where would you rather buy a farm if you were looking for a country home?

Child Drowned in Stock Tank

Cleo Jessie, the 18 months old child of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bunn, who live north of this city, was drowned last Thursday evening in a stock tank. The little one had accidentally fallen into the tank while trying to get a drink.

The body was found by the mother about six o'clock in the evening and medical aid was summoned. The baby's heart was still beating, but respiration could not be restored. The cup with which the child was getting a drink was found in the tank, but no other clue to the cause of accident could be found.

The funeral services were held at the residence on Saturday, being conducted by Rev. Finder, after which the remains were borne to the Lafayette cemetery and laid to rest. The bereaved parents have the deepest sympathy of a host of friends in their hour of sadness.—Auburn Herald.

Auburn's Enterprise Anent "Bottom" Road.

One of the features in the good roads problem has had its efficiency and practicability well illustrated by recent high water movements in southeastern Nebraska. At Auburn there is a two-mile stretch of elevated macadamized road-bed leading across the Nemaha river bottom into town. This road was built jointly by the U. S. government and the business interests directly concerned. During the wet weather flurries of the present spring and summer this piece of road has shown its efficiency by affording sure and easy access to town for the farmers east of the river, while other towns similarly situated, but without the convenience of an elevated road, have had their trade relations with the farming public greatly hampered, and the farmers have been greatly discommoded and the work of repairing roads is simply an afterthought, together with the expense it will necessarily entail. The public road question for eastern Nebraska is to become a live issue at no distant day from a strictly business point of view, and it must be handled upon broadest of lines. Half way measures in public road construction are but a nuisance, and sadly out of date. We must build for permanency and strictly along scientific lines. — Western Swine Breeder.

MARKET LETTER

From Our Regular Kansas City Stock Yards Correspondent

Kansas City Stock Yards.

July 29, 1908.

The cattle market continued to soften last week in spite of moderate receipts, grass killing steers getting most of the decline, 30 to 50 cents, grass cows 20 to 30 cents lower, stockers and feeders a quarter lower, while fed steers held nearly steady. The run is 12000 head today, moderate for this season, held down by the unsatisfactory market last week. Pastures all over the native territory are in good shape, and cattle doing well, and owners are reluctant to turn them loose while there is a prospect of adding to the weight. The market today is unevenly lower on steers again, caused mainly by a heavy run at Chicago today, and lower prices there. The supply of quarantines here is light, and is not a factor in depressing the market. Cows are about steady today, also stockers and feeders. A sale of pretty good steers at $6.65 this morning is considered 15 to 25 cents below close of last week, other sales about 10 lower, grass steers from Kansas and Missouri pastures $4.50 to $5.60, grass cows $2.50 to $3.60, bulls $2.40 to $3.75, canners $1.75 to $2.50. Calves sold higher last week, tops $6.00 to $6.25, but have lost slightly from the high time. Shipments from the Panhandle country are beginning to move freely, and a good many stockers and feeders are included, at $3.00 to $4.40. Oklahoma feeders sold today at $4.00, light weights. Shipments to the country last week amounted to 300 car loads, and this trade will grow each week from now on.

Hog prices declined 20 cents last week, under the influence of a determined bear campaign by the packers, and in spite of moderate receipts. The run is 4000 head today, market about steady at the close, after ruling weaker a part of the session. Speculative reasons are given for the attitude of packers, together with the increasing proportion of grassy stuff included, which they claim has been selling too close to good hogs. Heavy weights still lead, although shippers have also paid top price for good medium weight butchers. Top today is $6.50, bulk $6.30 to $6.45, light weights up to $6.40, which prices are about a quarter higher than at this time last year.
