Hoke Smith Was Here

Hoke Smith of Georgia spoke to a crowded room in the court house Tuesday evening.

He is the gentleman who was Secretary of the Interior under Cleveland and who was instrumental in cutting down the pensions of the old soldiers and the passage of the Wilson bill.

He is governor of Georgia and at the primaries for a second nomination last month he was repudiated by his own party.

He stated that he came here at the solicitation of W. J. Bryan.

He would not dare to make the speech in a labor center that he made here. His argument on tariff upholds what the republicans have claimed and what the democrats have denied as to the meaning of their platform. The republicans advocate a revision of the tariff upon a protective basis. The democrats deny that the plank in their platform demands a revision upon a revenue basis only, but Mr. Smith openly advocated such a theory. He demanded that we should buy where we can buy the cheapest, irrespective of country.

We well know that certain goods sell in foreign countries cheaper than here for the reason that labor is cheaper there than here and we further well know that if such a policy should be pursued by this country our shops would be either closed or the wages of the employees would be reduced to a par with European labor. Therefore the market for the products of the farm would be either destroyed or impaired and the farmer would be a great sufferer in the end.

His argument upon tariff was out and out free trade, and remember he comes as the spokesman of Bryan.

All we have to do is to remember the times under Cleveland when we had democratic free trade in order to realize the effect of free trade upon agriculture.

His argument upon injunction was ridiculous. It was this—"When Taft was a judge upon the bench he enjoined men." There he left it. He did not say why they were enjoined nor what from.

If a judge would enjoin a gang from murder according to Hoke Smith he would be doing wrong.

It was a little amusing to us Nebraskans who know Bryan so well to hear Smith upon publication of campaign contribution.

That is a subject which Bryan orates on with terrific vehemence away from home, but around here he is usually very quiet about it.

We remember very well about Tom Allen and Jim Dahlsen receiving $15,000 from the worst gamblers in New York to help elect Berge for Governor of Nebraska.

We have a law in Nebraska requiring every person who receives funds for campaign purposes to report it to a proper officer. No report has ever been made of that $15,000.

Tom Allen is Bryan's brother-in-law and Jim Dahlsen, the gentleman who was led out of a convention in Sioux City, Iowa, for drunkenness is now making speeches for Bryan in Illinois.

Upon bank guarantee, the gentleman is surely crude. To illustrate, we have three banks in Falls City. These banks are absolutely safe. They loan their money to our home people and their notes are good. No panic, no crisis could injure them. A deposit in either of them is absolutely safe. They could be no safer if you would pile guarantees upon them sky high, for they are absolutely safe now.

But if our banks have to guarantee the deposits of the gambler's banks in Wall street, of the banks down in Georgia where the loans are made to darkies upon old mules and plows, of the banks out in the west where old wagons and harness are put up as securities, don't you see that it would weaken our banks instead of strengthening them.

The same condition holds good in many other sections and the result would be that the banks in a good stable country would have to become liable for the banks in a poor barren country.

All in all, the speech of Hoke Smith when boiled down amounts to nothing. All we have to say is, just compare the progress, the growth, the prosperity which has come under republican administrations with conditions under democratic administrations and then take your choice.

APPEAL TO PUMPKINOLOGISTS

The growth of a real, genuine, old-fashioned, like-mother-used-to-make pumpkin pie is a gradually expanding poem; it must be just so, from Alpha to Omega, otherwise it fails of its mission, and should never have been born. To enter here into technical discussion anent the care and circumstance marking the honorable progress of the pumpkin from seed to pie is manifestly impossible. To such general suggestions as the Commoner makes we give hearty assent, and cordially refer every doubting Thomas to that interesting publication for further detail. It is merely our purpose now to emphasize at this season of pumpkin planting—now when the glorious October pie is the tiniest mite of a thing in embryo—to all pumpkinologists the duty upon them to plant, plant with care, plant for the palate of the connoisseur—if a true pumpkinologist can ever guess what that is! As the twig is bent, so the tree will incline; and as the pumpkin is properly started on its conquering career, so will its finish be marked by surpassing delight.

GODS OF HINDUSTAN.

India is a land of idols. It is estimated that there are 333,000,000 gods in Hindustan. The three great and specially venerated deities are Brahma, Vishnu and Siva—the Hindu Trimurti or trinity. Brahma stands first, unapproachable. There are only three temples in all India erected in his honor; he is merely invoked as chief of the Trimurti, but is not made the object of actual worship, as he is not supposed to take any interest in mundane affairs. He is the creator, the giver of all gifts and of all blessings, and controls the destinies of men, yet at the same time is completely indifferent to them.

Pain Weakens

Headache, rheumatism, neuralgia, or pains of any nature weaken the system—they are a strain upon the nerves. Almost instant relief can be obtained by taking Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and without any bad after-effects. Take one on first indication of an attack—it will ward it off. They are a pleasant little tablet, sold by druggists everywhere, 25 doses 25 cents; never sold in bulk.

"I was subject to constant headaches for a period of four years. At times I was almost unlit for the work in which I am engaged, that of station agent. Through the advice of a friend I tried Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and the result has been that I have entirely eradicated my system of those continuous headaches that follow a continual mental strain. They have done for me all that is claimed for them."

HABIT OF READING IN BED

Usually Bad Practice Condoned by One Writer, But Only Under Certain Conditions.

Reading in bed, like most luxuries, can be overdone, in fact there seems to be only one excuse for this fascinating way of ending the day. Certain people find that their worries accumulate in their brains after bedtime; their nerves are at high tension and their minds are actively at work trying to solve problems that should be left behind in the city, says a writer in The Family Doctor.

Going to bed with the brain in such a state means that with nothing to distract the thoughts, hearing nothing and seeing nothing in the darkness, imagination has full sway and hours of wakefulness may be the result. Such a man, we think, will find half an hour's reading in bed a great help.

With careful attention paid to the quality and position of the light so that without flickering it shines over the shoulder and directly on to the page the much maligned habit of reading in bed has sometimes a very beneficial effect on a tired and over-wakeful brain.

FOR THE SLEEPLESS.

During the evening do not read or sleep or indulge in exciting talk or discussion. Before retiring take a moderate walk of 15 or 20 minutes. Some people are kept awake by the food in the intestines. The habit of getting relief may be established for the evening instead of the morning with good results. A tepid bath with gentle rubbing will draw the blood from the brain to the surface of the body. If troubled by susceptibility to slight noises during the night, put a wad of cotton batting in the ears. This deadens the sounds.

NOW THE SARGENT NECK.

The reign of the Gibson girl is declared to be over. The latest demand is for the "Sargent neck."

The ultrafashionable woman of to-day must be long and attenuated and must have the aforesaid neck. The discovery has been made that the wonderful air of high bred distinction which Mr. Sargent is able to impart to his portraits is due largely to the treatment of the neck. In his paintings women have long, slender necks, which carry the head in regal poise.

TENT AND UNIFORM.

A California inventor has devised an interesting shelter tent, the canvas covering of which can be divided into sections and worn as a garment or uniform during the day, says Frank H. Gotsche in Popular Mechanics. Adapted for the use of troops, hunters and campers in general, the uniform, or poncho, as it is called, somewhat resembles the uniforms sometimes worn by the sailors of oriental countries.

ERRORS IN HIS GAME.

"It is very easy to say the wrong thing," remarked the moralist.

"That is very true," answered Senator Sorghum.

"I suppose, even cautious as you are, that you regret some of your utterances."

"Yes. On several occasions I have said 'I raise you' when I ought to have said 'I pass.'"

Crazy Hats.

There are some signs of hard times that no man with properly functioning optic nerves can overlook. Scores of milliners have obviously been compelled by adversity to discharge all their high salaried designers of art hats and employ in their stead madmen frantically eager to reproduce dementia Americana in headgear.
