GOLDEN ROD AS A REMEDY ALL LEAD THE SIMPLE LIFE

Plant Dedicated to St. Augustine of Hippo Was Once Used by Physicians. Example Set by People of Finland Might Be Followed with Profit by Others.

St. Augustine of Hippo, the great doctor of the church whose festival fell on August 28, is a sadly neglected saint among modern ritualists, and even occasionally confused with the namesake who insulted our British bishops. Yet he is pronounced by Hooker "without any equal," and regarded by Harnack as "the first modern man." He has been better honored in the floral world, for to him is dedicated the golden rod or wound wort (Solidago virgaurea.) Old Gerarde, with whom this was a favorite remedy, tells us that golden rod fetched a high price as a foreign herb until discovered growing near London, when the plant was neglected. He adds the caustic comment: "This verifieth our English proverb 'Far fetched and dear bought is best for ladies,' or for fantastical physicians." Before tobacco the golden rod also furnished snuff for our medieval forefathers.—Westminster Gazette.

IMPECUNIOUS.

"My dear, I wish you would bring me 'The Holy City.'"
"Good gracious, love! I can't even afford to buy Brighton!"

CHEAP WEDDING BREAKFAST.

After making special arrangements with a restaurant proprietor to decorate a table with flowers and assign special waiters to it, a bridegroom who was married here recently, who had said that a wedding party of 32 persons would order after they had seated themselves, appeared at the appointed time with the party and ordered coffee and cake for them, which they took one hour to consume.
After finishing their feast the happy husband gave the much chagrined proprietor $3.20 and left.—Astoria Correspondence, San Francisco Call.

HEIGHT OF CRIMINALS.

Dr. Charles Perrier says that criminals are for the most part of medium height. Thieves, he says, he found to be almost exclusively of medium stature and beggars nearly always of medium or slightly under that height. "It is seldom," he says, "that a fully developed beggar nature can be found in a large frame." Murderers, on the other hand, his observations prove to be above the average in size. All the prisoners under punishment for arson and for counterfeiting measured by him came under the head of "small." His observations were made in France.

TACT.

"You insisted on our coming to this hot, horrid place," shrieked Mrs. Outsome, "and I'm sunburned till I look like an Apache Indian!"
"Not at all, my love," said Mr. Outsome. "Your complexion is a clear, beautiful light brown."
Thus did a soft tan, sir, as it were, turn away wrath.

RASHNESS.

The candidate for office had openly advocated honesty.
Naturally the other managers of the machine were indignant.
"I always said that fellow was no politician," commented one, and the rest agreed that the outlook was dubious.

THE TROUBLE.

Love Comerly—Yes, Starman, the tragedian, is hopelessly mad.
Hi Tragedy—Overstudy?

COULDN'T READ IT.

While visiting in a small town in Connecticut, seven miles from the railroad station, I received occasionally a postal card from my fiancée, written in a kind of shorthand of our own. One day when a cousin was going to the post office I asked her to inquire if there was anything for me; she returned, saying there was nothing. The next day she made the same inquiry, when the postmaster showed her a postal card addressed to me and said: "Em, can you read this?" She said "No." Thereupon he said: "Neither can I, and I have been trying ever since yesterday." This illustrates the fact that curiosity is not confined to the fair sex.

NOW'S THE TIME.

The average novelist, it is well known, thinks little of the average playwright, and the playwright thinks less, if possible, of the novelist.
At the Players' club in New York they say that Clyde Fitch at a dinner sat opposite a popular novelist. The novelist criticised the American play; he seemed to think very little of it. Finally, yawning, he said: "When I am played out as a novelist I intend to write for the stage."
"Begin at once, then," said Mr. Fitch.

AT BYRON'S STATUE.

There is a statue of Byron in London, in Hamilton Gardens, separated only by a railing from the broad drive in Hyde park, and facing directly across the monstrous effigy of Achilles. Even on April 19 Byron's statue receives no attention save for the single wreath of Gloire de Dijon roses placed at its foot under the bequest of the lady who left a legacy for this purpose, and for the insertion of a memorial notice in the Times until the day that the dean of Westminster allows Byron's name to be inscribed in the Poet's Corner of the Abbey.

A GOOD PLACE FOR IT.

He—I've seen your face before.
She—That's where I generally carry it.

REASSURING.

"Captain," inquired the timid passenger, "are there any snags in this river?"
"Hundreds of 'em, ma'am," said the captain of the little steamer, "but I've run this boat on so many of 'em that I know exactly where they are. We'll be going right over one in a minute."
"Good gracious, captain! I can't!"
