NEBRASKA LAND MARKS

Land Marks That Will Interest Nebraska People

In the eastern part of Pawnee county are some old land marks which are of interest to all true Nebraskans.

One of these land marks is the rock from which Table Rock received its name. This rock is located about two miles from the present location of the town. The rock as it stands now, is about fifteen feet high and has about the same diameter at its base. Formerly another rock rested upon this one, which resembled a table, hence the name. Being composed of sandstone, the erosion of many years and perhaps centuries, has caused it to entirely disappear. The lower rock is composed of the same material so that it is gradually going the way of its predecessor.

Tradition has it that the savages who roamed this region years ago, used this rock for a table, which is not improbable, for from the top we get an excellent view of the Nemaha valley for quite a distance and the approach of an enemy could easily be seen.

Around this rock toward the north, are the famous caves, in which the Indians cooked their meals, fought with their enemies and when all was quiet, it was here they smoked their peace pipes. The most famous of all these land marks is a little east and across the river from the rock and caves. It is the famous Blacklaw mill. It is said to be the first mill to grind flour in Nebraska.

The mill has not been used since Blacklaw was shot. Superstitious people say that Blacklaw's ghost still visits the old mill at the mystic hour of darkness.

The town of Table Rock first started around this mill. Because of the overflowing of the Nemaha river, the town was moved farther west across the river. For the same reason they were again forced to move. This time the city was moved to its present site on the hill, where it could be destroyed by floods no more. J. G. Dodds.

Dislocated Shoulder

Mrs. H. E. Boyd of Humboldt, has been suffering this week from a dislocated shoulder sustained in a peculiar manner. In putting on her jacket about two weeks ago, she threw her arm back far enough to cause a sharp pain, of which she thought little at the time. The member continued to give her trouble until last Friday evening, when a medical examination revealed a dislocation of the bone as stated. It was restored to place and the patient will doubtless soon be fully recovered from her unpleasant experience.—Humboldt Leader.

Wins First Place

Miss Jessie Draper is continuing her enviable record made while a student of the Humboldt high school, and on last Friday evening was successful in winning first place in an oratorical contest at the Grand Island college, which institution she has been attending the past year, the contest being given to determine who should represent the college at the state contest at Crete on April 16th. Miss Draper will, therefore represent Grand Island at this time. Humboldt friends are pleased to learn of her success.—Standard.

Don't Use a Scarecrow

To Drive Away the Mail Order Wolf

You can drive him out quickly if you use the mail order houses' own weapon—advertising. Mail order concerns are spending thousands of dollars every week in order to get trade from the home merchant. Do you think for a minute they would keep it up if they didn't get the business? Don't take it for granted that every one within a radius of 25 miles knows what you have to sell, and what your prices are. Nine times out of ten your prices are lower, but the customer is influenced by the up-to-date advertising of the mail order house. Every article you advertise should be described and priced. You must tell your story in an interesting way, and when you want to reach the buyers of this community use the columns of this paper.
