A Case of Arbitration.

A rat and a weasel found an egg. They couldn't decide who should have it, so they arbitrated. A cat was the arbitrator. The cat awarded the egg to the rat. The rat ate the egg. The cat promptly ate the rat. The cat believes in arbitration; the rat doesn't.—Judge's Library.

SILVER

has more than its value to commend it—it is intrinsically beautiful and when embellished with the graceful designing and artistic shapes evolved by the modern silver-smiths, is beauty's crown of beauty.

This is especially true of our tableware, both Sterling and plated with only the best quality and lowest prices possible.
