BURKETT ON FREE LUMBER

We Quote a Part of Burkett's Free Lumber Address

In making a tariff bill we must consider the interests of the greatest number of people of this country. In my opinion it is of more importance to the people it will build up more industries and it will enable the people to support more industries if they can have their lumber cheaper. I am one of those who believe that by putting lumber on the free list it will reduce the price of lumber to the consumers in this country, and if it does not I am here to ask the question which I asked the Senator from Washington several days ago, when he was making his speech if it will not reduce the price of lumber, why are the people representing those states wherein lumber is located so much concerned about the proposition to reduce the tariff.

In making this bill of 1909 we ought at least to bring it up to 1909. When we put logs on the free list, and that was a good many years ago it might have been possible to float them down the river. But conditions have changed since that time. When the timber got farther back from the streams they had to manufacture it to meet the requirements of the transportation facilities. It was quite natural under the protective theory that the rate on finished lumber should be higher than on rough lumber. But today we have gotten as far away from the rough lumber as we are from the log proposition. You cannot buy a stick of the retail yards of the Mississippi Valley, and that condition has prevailed for ten years. Why? Because the lumber manufacturers have found that it is more profitable to handle finished lumber than rough lumber. They have found that they can save more in freight rates than it costs to finish it. So when you reduce the rate on rough lumber and leave a differential on finished lumber you are beginning the entire question, because rough lumber is not of any importance in the lumber controversy. In my opinion this differential on lumber is simply a humbug.

Which do you think won?

Not long ago two men, athletes, went into a contest to see which could stand erect and hold his arms stretched out full length at either side of his body for the longer time. One man had fed on steaks and chops, sausage, ham, roast beef, etc.; the other ate heartily, but confined himself to such foods as Quaker Oats, rice, macaroni, etc. Which do you think held out longer?

The first man lasted twenty-two minutes. The Quaker Oats-macaroni-rice chap concluded to stop after he had been at it more than three hours.

There's more strength and economy in eating lots of Quaker Oats than most people imagine.

Every family should eat plentifully of Quaker Oats at least once every day; breakfast is the best time. It strengthens you for the day.
