Lincoln may lose some good play-keep up the work they have been doing since the season started. The wonderful work of Thomas and Gagner both in fielding and with the stick will surely land them in higher company. They have always been in a class by themselves in their positions when it comes to fielding the sack an shortstop positions, but this year they have been hammering the ball with such persistency that there will be nothing to it but the big leaguers if they keep up the good work. At this time last year Thomas was hitting only .225 and Gagner .211, while this year both of them are hugging the .300 mark continually.
