"DING DONG" OF BELL WILL BE HEARD SEPTEMBER 6.

Little Tots, the Children and the Almost-Grown-Ups Soon to Take Up School Work.

Monday, September 6th, will be the initial day of the school year. Little tots will wend their way to the kindergarten; children will seek the Central and the almost-men-and-women, who have worked their way from the bottom round of the ladder to the top so far as our schools will permit, will be seen in pairs and in groups, talking of their last year's pleasures and work as they make their way to the High school.

Several changes in the teaching forces will greet the scholars upon their arrival. S. H. Wood, B. Pe., Ph. B., is the new superintendent. Mr. Wood is strictly an Iowa product, having been born there. His first experience as a teacher was in the rural schools of that state. He secured his degrees, Bachelor of Pedagogy and Bachelor of Philosophy, at Drake University. He taught Latin and English two years in Drake Academy. For three years he was principal of the public schools of school, her position at Central to be filled by Miss Ramona Wilcox; the work at the Zion Annex will be handled by Miss Goldie Yocam.

A large enrollment is expected in every school and several rooms will undoubtedly be growded.

AT THE BUSINESS COLLEGE

THE YEAR'S TERM OPENS MONDAY, AUGUST 30.

Prof. H. L. Darner, a Man of Great Experience Has Charge of Well Known School.

The Business College school year will start Monday, August 30th—a week previous to the starting of the city schools.

The college will be conducted in the Wahl building. The place has been cleaned and papered, blackboards have been arranged in position and the room will make a pleasant one for the purpose.

Falls City affords a Business college, such as few towns, if any, of its size is fortunate to possess. Prof. H. L. Darner, who will be in charge is a self-made man, having been born on a farm in Southeastern Nebraska and receiving the customary education of a farmer lad. His first schooling was secured under difficulty, being forced to drive five miles in the winter time to a high school, and then to take a nine months' course of study in six, on account of it not being possible for him to start when school opened.

After graduating from the high school he attended the Northwestern

Professor H. L. Darner.

Business College of Beatrice, Nebr., where he taught several months, after graduating from that school.

His next experience as an instructor was at Superior, Wis., where he had several departments in a business college. Feeling the need of actual business experience, he resigned his position in this college to act as bookkeeper and cashier for a large firm.

Getting the actual business experience he desired, he put the finishing touches to his education by graduating from the Zanerian college of Columbus, Ohio, with the highest grade of any student who ever graduated from that school during its twenty-five years existence. After graduating, his ability was desired in the school and for three years he taught in all branches of the institution. During his employment there he conducted a Y. M. C. A. night school.

Mr. Darner has since been assistant editor of the Business Educator, one of the foremost educational journals in the country.

Nearly every state in the Union contains instructors in business colleges who were once Mr. Darner's pupils.

Recently he had charge of the penmanship department at the teachers' institute in this city, where two periods each day were conducted. To show the interest taken in these classes, there were many of the teachers who made a special effort to attend both periods. No department was given greater attention than was this one.

These few remarks concerning the qualifications of Mr. Darner, we deem necessary to prove our first assertion that few, if any, towns the size of Falls City afford such excellent opportunities for a business education.

Mr. Darner will be assisted in the work by his wife, who is amply qualified for her departments.

Bookkeeping, penmanship, spelling, business arithmetic, commercial law, letter writing, and shorthand and typewriting will be handled at the school this year.

URSULINE ACADEMY TO OPEN

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 6TH THE OPENING DAY.

An Institution that Affords Superior Advantages to the Youth of the Community.

The Ursuline Academy will start their school Monday morning, Sept. 6th. This school is conducted by the Ursuline Sisters and is both a boarding school and a day school.

The geographical location for this academy is ideal, picturesque and perfect. The grounds for outdoor exercises are spacious, and the whole place is unexcelled for health.

The school building is new and was last year modernly equipped—well lighted and heated by steam.

This institution affords every advantage to the youth to acquire a thorough mental, moral and physical education. Special attention is paid to etiquette and the formation of character at this school.

The Normal department offers a course in all branches necessary to fit its graduates for the position of teachers.

Superior advantages are offered in vocal and instrumental music, voice training, elocution, languages (English, German, Latin and French) and in physical culture.

With these few remarks The Tribune wishes the Ursuline Academy success the coming school year.

OLD SOLDIER GONE

John Plybon, Veteran of The Civil War, Passed Away Last Week.

John Plybon, another veteran of the Civil war, passed away last week, and was buried by his comrades of the Grand Army, the funeral being on August 19th, at the G. A. R. hall, Rev. Hattie Mauger, president of the W. R. C. officiating.

John Plybon was seventy-five years old. He was born in West Virginia. He enlisted at the age of twenty-eight in Co. G. 11th Penn. Infantry, on August 17, 1862, and served in the army of the Potomac until the close of the war, being mustered out near the city of Washington on May 31, 1865.

He was with Gen. Burnside at the battle of Fredericksburg. He crossed the Rappahannock river early in the morning of the battle on the pontoon bridge, and was in the thick of the fighting, at one time being in the town Fredericksburg. At night he recrossed the river on the pontoon bridge. He was with Gen. Hooker at the battle of Chancellorsville, and he was with Gen. Mead at the battle of Gettysburg, being in the first days fighting, in which his regiment was so badly cut up that it could not be used again in this battle.

He was with Gen. Grant at the siege of Petersburg, a good portion of the time being engaged in building corduroy roads of forest trees and building breastworks. At the blowing up of Fort Fisher, he was near enough to have a rifle ball upset his tin cup in which he was making coffee at a camp fire. He was also in the engagements around Appomattox, and took part in the Grand Review of the army at Washington at the close of the war.

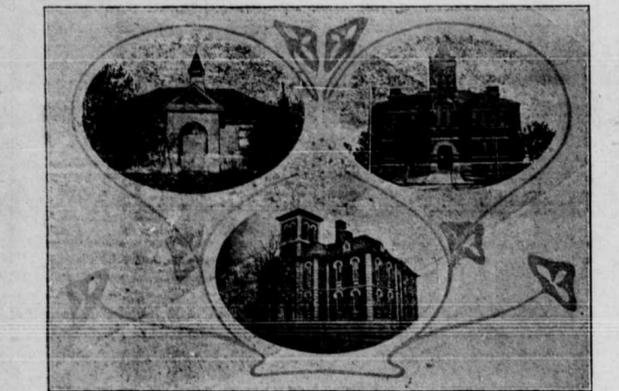

During all his army life he was never wounded or taken prisoner, but was seriously sick on several occasions. At one time when in the hospital, the soldier on an adjoining cot died, and when the dead soldier was measured for a coffin, the officer said they had just as well take his measure also as he would bedead before morning. But he lived, to do more fighting with his regiment for his country.

He moved to Falls City in 1905, but being old and infirm he lived a retired and quiet life, and but few other than his near neighbors and old army comrades became acquainted with him.

All who knew him respected and admired him as a man who had made good as a soldier and a citizen, and who will be missed by his old army comrades.

Irish Hospitality.

John Kanaly got a telephone from his nephew, Rob, saying he and his wife and baby would come down if there wasn't too much company already. "Come on," says John, "there isn't any one here." But by the time supper was ready other folks besides Rob's had arrived until with home folks there were twenty-five for supper, welcome but unlooked for guests. However true Irish hospitality was equal to the occasion and all had a jolly time.—Rulo Register.

Malcom, Ia., and was superintendent of the Parkersburg public schools for four years. Mr. Wood is in every way qualified to take charge of our schools and the writer, having met him, will vouch for his personality and pleasing ways. The Tribune predicts a very satisfactory school under his leadership.

Prof. E. K. Hurst will retain his position as principal. He needs no introduction to people in this community, having been here long enough to endear himself in the hearts of all who are fortunate enough to be personally acquainted with him. Prof. Hurst will without doubt keep his department up to the highest standard and be an able and valuable assistant to Superintendent Wood.

Fred E. Hayes of Lincoln has been added to the High School faculty; Miss Eva Scott will teach the Seventh grade at Central; Miss Edna Brown, who taught the Third grade at Central last year, has been transferred to the Second grade at Harlan
