We hear of no great movement towards colonizing the North pole since its discovery.

The county board has purchased a cement machine and will build their own culverts in the future.

Settle with your ice man and order a ton of coal. Time changes all things, and it will take the majority of your change to accomplish this feat.

The voice of the democratic machine talks fluently of republican deception, while every utterance made in that journal is taken by the public with an (?). Why bless you man, you haven't written a truthful statement in so long that you have forgotten how.

Should the voice of the democratic machine reproduce its utterances regarding "third termers" that appeared in its columns some months ago, it might be interesting at this time. No doubt it would accomplish more public good than to cite the public to a "faction" in the republican ranks that does not exist.

The entire republican ticket is composed of capable men. Each man is fitted for the position he aspires to fill and we see no reason for a republican voter to desire to add another term to the opposition because they have filled two terms faithfully. Faithful service is what the public has a right to expect of every public official and they do not receive it, one term is sufficient. There is a seed time and the harvest, and a lie berth in one is not good politics. Things are not always what they appear on the surface.

HIGHLY FLATTERED.

To what extent a man's imagination will carry him is fully exemplified in the last issue of the democratic voice.

Editorially, the management of The Tribune commented upon the democratic machine treatment of R. C. James in his recent candidacy for county judge. Not an assertion was made was denied by that great exponent of democracy, but he at once begins a tirade of personal abuse upon C. F. Reavis, dubbing him as the author in this very strong language.

"The sweet sentimental strains therein will at once be recognized as the product of the pen of Mr. Reavis. No one ever becomes quite as sentimental and no one makes a greater failure of hiding his identity."

We feel highly complimented by having our product classed among the high order that is always the product of Mr. Reavis' pen, but what of Mr. Reavis? He certainly must feel that the mighty have fallen when such judgment is passed upon him by his famed critic. We consider Mr. Reavis among the best writers in the state and we are always glad to give him space, but will say for the benefit of this lost soul, to whom a true and just statement of facts is a stranger, that owing to a press of personal business, Mr. Reavis has not written a line for The Tribune for months except such as headed, "communicated."

We hope this explanation will appease the wrath of his highness, and that in justice to Mr. Reavis, he make public acknowledgement of this gross injustice. Will he act the part of a man? You can guess.

A PLAIN BUNGO GAME.

The reading public is already familiar with the "non-partisan" bongo game of the democratic platform of 1909, formulated for the express purpose of deceiving Nebraska republicans into voting for the democratic candidates for the supreme court and regents of the university, under the thin disguise that the democratic candidates are the best men "because they are democrats." The democratic platform deceitfully words the non-partisan game in this wise: "We urge all Nebraskans in voting for supreme judges and for regents to lay aside party prejudice and ties. We hope no democrat will vote for a candidate for either of these offices merely because the candidate is a democrat, and that no republican will vote for such a candidate because he is a republican. We urge each and every voter of all parties to vote for the man when he goes to the box this fall and not for the party label." This pronouncement "listens well" and if it were not for the overwhelming mass of evidence ready at hand to prove the hide-bound partisan character of the democratic party of Nebraska at all times, these "fair words of promise" might deceive the citizen who does not go beneath the surface for the real facts. But the proof is ample and has been piled up by the democratic politicians themselves in mass that can not be overlooked except by him who will not see.

The last session of the Nebraska legislature, of unfavorable memory, was directed by an overwhelming majority in both houses and ruled over by a democratic governor. Democratic partisans were in complete control and worked their sweet will without let or hindrance. Was there a "halo of non-partisanship" resting above the democratic legislature and the democratic governor? Was there a rainbow of non-partisan promise displayed in the political sky to assure republican officials and employees of the state that the democratic party stood "for the man and not the party label?" Not that anybody could detect with the naked eye. Instead of a show of non-partisanship the democratic party through its authorized and accredited agents, the legislature and governor, indulged in a saturnalia of partisan legislation the parallel of which has not been offered in any other state in the union. Every state official, employe, board, commission and operative who could be reached by statutory enactment was "Mullenized" into a partisan democrat as rapidly as the legislative wheels could grind out the necessary room at the democratic pie counter. No less than twelve separate laws were passed to give the democratic governor power to remove republicans from the service of the state and put democratic partisans in their places and those twelve enactments covered every possible state employment that could be reached by legislative effort. This is a grand showing of which democrats may found the claim of sincerity (?) in their "non-partisan" pretensions this year and ought to be valuable evidence that democrats want "the man" and not "the party label."

Further and incontrovertible evidence of the deceit in the democratic "non-partisan" campaign this year is the fact that the democratic politicians of the state, the "fine-workers" and manipulators of the party, and the avowed democratic press of the state, have all lined up solidly behind the democratic candidates and are fighting for their election tooth and nail in the same old desperate partisan way. Democratic politicians are "non-partisan" this year when they see no hope of winning in any other way. No republican voter should permit himself to be deceived by the shallow and ridiculous pretention.

THE WOLF COMING. One of The Shubert Successes is Coming Here. Next Wednesday evening, September 15, at the Gehling Theatre will be a gala event among amusement seekers, the occasion being the first presentation in this city of "The Wolf," the latest play of Eugene Walter, as produced by the Messrs. Sam S. and Lee Shubert and the one that created such a furore in New York and Chicago where it enjoyed long runs, to audiences that tested the capacity of the theatres. "The Wolf" is said to be strong in conception, dramatic in execution and vitally interesting throughout. It tells a story of that wonderful Hudson Bay country and of the primal, eternal struggle between man for the possession of a woman. Dark passion and pure sentiment are set in opposition, but there is nothing hackneyed. The men are not of the familiar stage type, nor are the scenes of a mechanical order. The father of Hilda McTavish is a Scotchman whose narrowness of mind drives his wife into the world. The child, Hilda, is left behind. When McDonald, a handsome American engineer, appears, he covets the simple girl and engages old McTavish in a plot to lure Hilda the way her mother had gone. McDonald is not a villain for the "gods," however, and deeds of violence he leaves to the hero, which certainly seems to be contrary to all the old traditions. It is here that the critics claim the art of the playwright is seen at its best. There crops Jules Beaubien, a French Canadian, with a streak of Ojibway from his mother. McDonald has left Jules's sister to die with her unborn babe. Jules recognizes him and bids his time. Baptiste, his loyal retainer, crosses himself gently as he swears that unless Jules kills McDonald, he will. Jules overhears the plotting of McDonald and McTavish in reference to the innocent Hilda. McDonald has been married and was a gay blade on the White Way. Jules, of course, loves Hilda. The man enraged, declares he will crush her life out with his bare hands. The French Canadian intervenes, striking McDonald with his fist. The engineer attempts to draw his revolver, but Baptiste has him covered with a shotgun in the cabin window. At this point the scene closes, and one may imagine easily that the interest has increased. Immoral as he is, McDonald is fearless and persistent. He takes to the path and comes upon Jules. He fires at him, but his shot does not go home. Then the two engage in the most realistic and fiercest hand-to-hand duel ever seen on the stage. Now up and down, rolling over and over in the dim light for fully a minute, the fighters struggle. Finally one is seen to drop lifeless from a stab wound. The victor lights a match and the glowing face of Jules is seen by the audience. Seats will be placed on sale next Monday morning. Don't waste your money buying plasters when you can get a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment for twenty five cents. A piece of flannel dampened with this liniment is superior to any plaster for lame back, pains in the side and chest, and much cheaper. Sold by all druggists. The Cartoonist's Sting. Signs and symbols seem to be just as effective now as in the early days of our race, when the primitive aboriginal chiseled in picture language the record of his doings. There are still enough undeveloped minds among us to give pictures more force than printed words, and the whiplash on the end of the cartoonist's facile pencil more and more frequently raises welts where the editorial and "spread" headline cannot sting the thick hide. Memorial to Mary Anning. Lyme Regis church, which, like many another building in that quaint old Dorset seaport, is in danger of slipping into the waves, has comparatively little interest for tourist or townsman to loiter over. Its most remarkable memorial is the stained glass window to Mary Anning. This was the schoolgirl who, in 1811, disturbed the last rest of the saurian monster - Ichthyosaurus Pliatodon - whose remains now lie in the Natural History museum at South Kensington. As curious a find as any that ever came to the net of a child on the beach. But Mary Anning possibly had that sort of thing in her blood, for her father was the proprietor of a curiosity shop - London Chronicle. Dr. Abernethy, the great English physician, said, "Watch your kidneys. When they are affected, life is in danger." Christian Church. Two splendid audiences last Lord's day. The pastor feels very grateful for the interest the members are taking in all branches of church work. Forty-five were in attendance at prayer meeting last Wednesday. Our aim is fifty - will you try and help us reach our aim? Evangelistic service, 8:00 p. m. The orchestra will play for the Sunday school as well as for the morning and evening services. All are cordially invited. F. E. DAY, Minister. Farmers' Institute. The management of the association takes great pleasure in announcing that their efforts to have a meeting of the association have met with unanimous favor, among the people of Falls City, as to warrant the assertion that this year's show will eclipse any former effort. About $200 has been secured and more is promised. Now it only remains for the farmers to do their part, as they have done before, and we will have a show that the "banner" county of Nebraska will have a good reason to be proud of. Plan to attend and bring something to exhibit. Watch for the premium list some time this month. Talk it up. Work for it, and watch results. Dates, December 14, 15 and 16, subject to change. - Long.

First Methodist Episcopal Church. An All at Home service will be held as a closing of the conference year. Every member's presence is expected. There will be a short address, some specially-prepared music and then the following program will be followed: A presentation and dedication. The offering. The membership roll call. The names of those who have removed during the year, by certificate and by death. The number of members. The officer elected for the coming year, together with the various committees. Reports from trustees - the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Woman's Home Missionary Society, Ladies' Aid Society, the Young Ladies' Kensington. The Father Snock fund for the poor. The Epworth and Junior Leagues. The Sunday School. The year's financial exhibit by treasurer, A. D. Cameron. C. A. MASTIN.

Horse Show is a Go. The committee on finance has been very successful and enough money has been raised for a liberal premium list and other expenses. The management feels confident of a good show. If the finance committee are successful in raising a little more they aim to secure a band from one of the neighboring towns for the day. W. T. Parkinson of Pawnee City, has been secured for judge. Wednesday the first entries were taken and the secretary received twelve in about an hour. The farmers are taking great interest and are listing their best horses. There will be classes with liberal premiums for all kinds of horses. There will be two classes for ladies only. One ladies' single driver, the other ladies' saddler, mounted. Watch these columns for rules for entering and premium list next week. COMMITTEE

St. Thomas Church. The Woman's Auxilliary to the board of missions of St. Thomas church, will meet next Monday night at the home of Mrs. H. R. Miner at 7:15. The rector kindly asks all the members to be present. The night service at St. Thomas church will be renewed next Sunday night. The shortened form of Evensong will be said followed by a sermon. Service will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

Poor Richard's Almanac. A good example is the best sermon. God heals, and the doctor takes the fees. You may be too cunning for one, but not for all. Words may show a man's wit, but actions his meaning. An ounce of wit that is bought is worth a pound that is taught. Keep your eyes wide open before marriage, half shut afterwards. Ne'er take a wife till thou hast a house (and a fire) to put her in. If a man could have half his wishes, he could double his troubles. Drink does not drown care, but waters it and makes it grow faster. If you would keep your secret from an enemy, tell it not to a friend. Good sense is a thing all need, few have, and none think they want. Pride breakfasted with Plenty, dined with Poverty, supped with Infamy. When out of favor none know thee; when in, thou dost not know thyself. If your riches are yours, why don't you take them with you to the other world? Lend money to an enemy, and thou'll gain him; to a friend, and thou'll lose him. Be civil to all, serviceable to many; familiar with few; friend to one; enemy to none. Work as if you were to live a hundred years; pray as if you were to die tomorrow. The wise man draws more advantage from his enemies than the fool from his friends. A wise man will desire no more than what he may get justly, use soberly, distribute cheerfully, and leave contentedly. Doing an injury puts you below your enemy; revenging one makes you even with him; forgiving it sets you above him.
